

I recovered myself, and approached our captain; he was standing in the same position as before the vessel had passed us, and appeared to be insensible to the objects around him. I spoke to him, but he answered me not; I shook him, and he roused from a stupor or reverie. It was some time before his mind resumed its empire, and he afterwards told me, that, in all his dangers and perils, and when death stared him in the face, and deliverance seemed impossible, he was never so impressed with the certainty of his destruction as at that moment. As for me, I shall never forget my feeling on that eventful night, and cannot, even now, look back without horror on the danger of my situation. Mirror.
