From Bell's Messenger, Oct. 30.

Final accommodation between Russia and Turkey, and considerations on the affairs of Greece.

The negotiations between Turkey and Russia, which have now subsisted for more than two years, and which displayed a degree of obstinacy on one part, and imbecility on the other, scarcely to be paralleled in the annals of national treaties, have at length reached to a conclusion. It appears that the Russian ultimatum has been accepted by the Turks, and the basis of the new treaty being laid, the articles will soon be made public.

The only interest which, as Englishmen we feel in this treaty between Powers which differ so very little in their relative civilization, is, whether its object be to sever these provinces from the barbarous domination of the Turks, and to raise them to a degree of international independence, similar to the Ionian Islands,—that is to say, giving them the guarantee of the greater Powers of Europe to prevent their again lapsing into their former state; or whether the intention of Russia be to leave Greece to her fate, and to the issue of the struggle in which she has been so long engaged.

These are the only inquiries which it is worth while to make into the articles of the Treaty of Ackerman; for as to Russia erecting Greece, or suffering Greece to establish herself into a free republic, it is quite out of the question. We believe that none of the parties who concurred in the Holy Alliance would suffer a republic to be erected so nearly in the heart of Europe as the Greek provinces. Against this, we should think, they would all exert themselves. Greece free, and Poland in chains, with Italy tugging at the oar, like one of her own galley-slaves, would present too terrible an anomaly, and be contrary to all the principles upon which that memorable breakwater, the Holy Alliance, was constructed, to check the flow of liberal principles, and curb the running stream of general improvement.

If we be asked, then, what we consider the purport of the new treaty? We answer we conceive that it stipulates nothing favourable to Greece;—that it leaves Greece to herself; that it is dictated in that cold hearted policy which the law of nations may undoubtedly justify, but which the law of nature and humanity condemns. We very much fear that this treaty is a perfect abandonment of Greece.

SHIPWRECK.—A private letter from Bermuda contains the following information.—“The schr. Providence, Capt. Shaw loaded at Antigonishe, N. S. with fish and lumber, met with a violent gale on the 8th Sept. lat. 21, long. 62; both masts carried away by the board, with all the deck load; fish all spoiled.—Survey called, and vessel judged unworthy of outfit; sold for 400 dollars; crew saved.”—Free Press.

We understand, that the LORD BISHOP of the Diocese will hold an Ordination in St. Paul's Church, on Sunday next, when the Rev. Joseph Fraser Leightbourn, A. B. and the Rev. Robert Mautach, from Bermuda, will be admitted to the Holy Order of Priests.
