Leave granted.

It will be observed that on this last mentioned day "The House went into committee to make valid Marriages solemnized before Magistrates and other Lay persons."

We could not approve a Law that sanctioned in a Magistrate or Layman the performance of so solemn a rite as Matrimony. It should be the Clergyman's exclusive privilege, because it is of divine origin, and founded upon those writings which he is presumed to be best acquainted with.

Extreme cases will, and do, we grant, sometimes occur to make an exception to the rule, perhaps, indispensable; but it ought to be in those extreme cases only that the power should be vested in the magistrate. As the subject now stands, it is fraught with danger and uncertainty, and no better proof is wanted to support this argument, than the present proposed Bill.

We wish the House had thought proper to enquire how many Marriages have been performed by Laymen, in this Province, without a Licence? yet these are some of the Marriages it has been called upon to pass a law to render "valid!"

As to the motions about the Roads, improving them and so forth, we think they are matters in which the House cannot use too much caution and deliberation. We ourselves have received very serious charges against many of the persons who have been allowed money for improvements of this nature, but whose private interests were paramount to their public duty.

We presume not to dictate any measures to compel a performance of a trust of so much consequence; but some better regulations than those which at present exist are highly necessary.
