Why that, in the place of 1.000 tons, it new amounts to 391,000 and that in the last year it has exceeded of every other except 1825 .- As to land there had been a great increase of de both in the Baltic and the Colonies, he rejoiced in the proof of increased mfort in that country, shown by the connption of three or four times its former ount of timber. It was said he had reced the Baltic trade. But in the year 84, the quantity of timber which came m British North America was 784 loads ; in the Baltie 105,000. In the year 25, we imported from America 407,000 ds; and from the Balic 270,000. lear.) Comparing the Foreign and Britrade to the Baltic for the last ten years, average was_British, 55,000 loads_ reign, 59,000; in the last year_Brit-100,000 loads_Foreign 112,000; ing a balance in favour of the Foreigner : t this year of fatal reciprocity it stood s._British 88,000_Foreign, 68,000. lear.) With regard to the building of ips at our home and foreign ports, over. ding has reduced the prices. With reect to the coasting trade, it amounted in 110,000; in 1825 8,340,000; and 1826, 8,306,000 tons. Thus, this de bas grown with our growth, and was ur coasis : and this coasting trade was the est for forming good sailors and keeping p the shipping interest, for it was carried peven in winter and calculated to give ill and boldness to our seamen. He had so been abused on account of the act of 825, which opened the trade of our coloes to friendly nations, under certain contions. He had thought it better not to pasider North America as mere sugar Isermisson to make a nail or weave a yard of oth for themselves.
