SURVEYOR GENERAL'S OFFICE,

19th Nov. 1827.

PART 1st OF LIST OF ANSWERS TO PETITIONS FOR LAND--which have been entertained by His Majesty's Council up to the 5th of May last, and referred by them to the various Departments for reports, or directed by them to be laid by until due examination could be made concerning the circumstances with which their various prayers were connected.

In order to prosecute the views and give efficacy to the intentions of His Majesty's Council, and in redemption of the pledges given by the Government to the individuals interested, by the entertaining of their applications, His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor has been pleased to take such petitions into consideration, and has come to the following decisions upon them in conformity with the principles hitherto acted upon.

Other cases similarly situated, now on file, will, as quickly as possible, be laid before the Lieut. Governor, and his decision upon them published in like manner.

The parties to whom these answers apply will of course have the usual indulgence of six months to take out their grants, and are not included in the late notice regarding the 31st December next.

From the Eastern Republican published at Bangor, in the State of Maine, we make the following extracts:--

The more immediate object of this communication is the treatment of the English to our Aroostook settlers. These ill fated settlers, a few weeks since, were summoned to appear at the Court in Fredericton. Their summons were in due form of law, signed by the Attorney General, amounting each settler in the penal sum of one hundred pounds, if they did not obey the command and appear at Court for the alleged offence of trespassing on Crown Land. And when they did appear at Court, they could not tell by what law they could punish them. Thus, Americans, were our friendly settlers on the Aroostook river under the necessity of obeying the imperious mandate of a British Court--a Court which had neither right nor jurisdiction over them. The English claim the Aroostook as a part of their province, under the tacitious plea of the treaty of '83. This is idle; it is supporting a claim by words without reason or principle. The settlement of this line to the source of the St. Croix is mutual by the two nations. There they have erected a monument, to which both nations agree. And the words of the treaty are so clear from the monument to the highlands, it needs no misunderstanding them. A man must be either a knave or a fool to be quibbling on this subject. What School boy, having a knowledge of surveying, cannot run a line from the monument directly north until it strikes the highlands? These highlands must divide the river, and one class of these rivers must fall, or empty themselves into the St. Lawrence. It is a subject of deep regret, that this is not settled. It is a source of vexation to our infant settlements the disputed territory. Nothing can be more unfavorable to emigration and settlement on the Aroostook, and in that part of the State, than the nonsettlement of this line. It seems there must be a final settlement; one or the other must be settled.
