IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

House of Commons-May 2.

THE CANADAS.

Mr. Huskisson said, that the subject to which he of the Canadas more to the satisfaction of those who circumstances it was thought desirable to take eve. desired to call the attention of the House, however were governed, and more conducingly to the inteuninviting it might be in its aspects, and however rests of the mother country. it might bear upon interests and feelings remote He was anxious to save, as much as possible, the subjects. Accordingly the Act of 1744 was resort. from the country, was, nevertheless, one of very time of the House, and therefore he would not enter ed to. That Act recorded all the ordinances under considerable importance. The question which he at any great length into a detail of the changes which the Colony had been governed, up to that wished to prevail upon the House to submit to the which had taken place, either in the constitution or period; it re-established all the French laws and investigation of a select committee was, whether the administration of the Government of Canada, French admistration, as far as related to property, in those extensive, valuable, and fertile possessions, since it became a possession of the British Crown, all its branches; also the administration of the civil the provinces of Canada, were or were not adminis- further than to make intelligible to the House the law, which included all the ordinances of the French tered under a system of civil government, suited to grounds of the controversies and differences which Governors, up to the time of the conquest, and the the wants, and well being, and happiness of near a had arisen in the colony. The House was aware Roman civil law; and the Act likewise provided million of British subjects now inhabiting those co- that the colony was ceded to the British Crown by for retraining the administration of the criminal lonies, and well adapted to the maintenance of those the King of France, under the treaty of 1763. The law of England. From that period, therefore, Camutual relations of allegiance and subjection which British Crown thus became possessed of it with nada had been governed under the system of civil ought to exist between colonies and the mother full and entire sovereignty, without any stipulation law which existed under the French administration, country? If, upon enquiry, it should be found that or obligation on the part of this country, with re- and, under a system of civil law derived from this counthe present system did not answer those functions, spect to the mode in which they were hereafter to try. Between 1763 and 1774, the British Crown had and that alterations were necessary which could be administered. It was necessary to observe that proceeded to settle new inhabitants, and make grants not be made without the authority of Parliament, it the country, so far as it had been settled, had been of land, and all the grants so made were held by the was for Parliament to deal with the evil, and to pro-settled about the middle of the 17th century, or tenure of common soccage. mote such changes as should seem requisite for the 1660. When first the French Sovereign directed The Act provided that all the lands thus granted purpose of improving the existing condition of the his attention to the Canadas, the population was should continue to be held in the same manner; colonies. Though there might exist defects, as in- confined within certain districts bordering on the but it at the same time placed this property under the deed was acknowledged, in the present mode of River St. Lawrence, and the two towns being built, administration of the complicated law which exist. administering in those colonies, it did not necessarily -namely Montreal and Quebec. At the period ed prior to the annexation of Canada to Eng. follow that any person was responsible or to blame of the conquest, the number of French settlers did land. In the same year (1774) another Act for those imperfections. The constitution under not exceed 65,000. Amongst this limited popula- was passed for the conciliation of Canada, which those colonies were governed, was introduced tion, it had been thought wise by the French Go- That provided that all duties which had been iminto that house by some of the greatest characters vernment to graft the whole of the feudal system of posed by the French Government, and had been that had ever been within its walls. That constitu- France, as it existed in all its vigour, and, he might continued to be levied by the English Government tion had, besides, been fully canvassed and discus- add, in all its deformity, about the middle of the from the period of the conquest up to that moment, sed before it was adopted; but when it was consi- 17th century. This was not unlike the manner in should cease, and in their lieu, imposed other dered how little the country was known, how thinly which the French built their country houses at this duties of a less onerous nature, with this furit was then and even now settled, it could not be a period, which usually possessed all the errors in ther provision,—that the produce of the new duties matter of surprise, that in the application of that taste which distinguished Versailles, and wanted all should be applied solely and exclusively to the betsystem to the details of the government of such a its grandeur. In the same bad taste, the French tering of the administration of the civil government country, imperfections should have arisen which re- Government established the feudal system in Cana- and justice of the colony: thus, then, it would be quired remedy, and omissions were discovered which da, in the midst of a boundless wilderness and a seen, that in 1774 some of the most valuable booms must be supplied. In the investigation about to small population. If he wished to illustrate the were conferred on Canada, by the British Legislatake place, he trusted the committee would always evils resulting from this state of things, he might ture. One of those boons was the restoration of bear in mind the great principle on which this coun- state, that whilst the French grafted the feudal sys- the laws under which the inhabitants lived before endly the impartial application of that authority to the experiment of granting a Legislative Assembly alive, made an apportionment of the elective it the circumstances of the case, the colonist would to the latter Colony. The people of Canada were cheerfully acquiesce in; and he sincerely believed then very much attached to the customs which that the result of the measure he was about to pro- they had derived from their former Government, pose, would be to allay the existing animosities, and they were very little pleased with the administration of the pleased with the pleased with the administration of the pleased with the pleased with the pleased with the administration of the pleased with the p and to enable the Government to carry on the affairs tration of the new Government; and under those try had hitherto acted, which was to fulfil with good tem in the colony, they did not adopt that part of the time of the conquest: another boon which faith all the engagements we were under towards the system which relates to the law of succes- must have pleased the Canadians greatly, was the the French settlers, who were the original popu- sion, which was that of primogeniture, and would recognition of their religion, as the established relation of the country, or at least so far as was con- have been intelligible; but they resorted to the ligion of the state: another boon was the mitigasistent with the introducing, as much as possible, custom of Paris, by which the land was allotted into tion of their fiscal burdens, and the application of the benefit of British laws and institutions, and that lordships, held by the original grantee. These the remaining revenue to the maintenance of their system of jurisprudence which had so much contri- seignories, which in the language of the law own government. buted to advance the prosperity of this country were in corporeal hereditaments, were not ca- In 1788, a law was passed in this country, which and her dependencies. There could be no difficulty pable of severance, though they might be divided though not immediately connected with the colony In undertaking to examine fully and fairly into all into ever so minute shares. In this state, things in question, was in some degree bearing upon it, the merits and demerits of the present system of go- have remained ever since, and in consequence of and was a momorable part of the Legislation, as revernment in Canada, as connected with the consti- the division of the land into various shares, such garded the colonies. The law to which he alluded tution given by the act of 1781. The legislature confusion had arisen, as was greatly to the prejudice was the declaration Act, which provided that all was at liberty to alter every act as they thought pro- of those who had to administer the affairs of the the sums raised by the Legislative Assemblies of per. He stated this, not on any abstract or general colonies, as well as of those who possessed property the Colonies, should be applied to defray the exreasoning, though he might if he pleased to do so, there. The extent of confusion and difficulty arising pense of the government of those colonies. because there must be a paramount and superior from this system was hardly conceivable. Only one sense it might be said that this Act did not appear to the said that the said the said that the said the said the said the said that the said the said the said that the said the said that the said the sai power in Parliament, to redress any wrong that ex- that morning he saw an advertisement in a Cana- ply to Canada, because it had then no Assembly. isted in the depencies of the country, and to esta- dian paper, stating that 1-1300th part of one of these In 1791, it was thought necessary by Mr. Pitt to the blish any system which might be considered neces- seignories was to be sold. He believed it would treduce an Act commonly called the 'Quebec Act sary for the welfare of all the subjects of the state. even puzzle Mr. Finlayson himself, to make out which excited very particular attention at the period In the present case, however, the principle of the what portion of property was described in another owing to the peculiar situations of parties. The right of the legislature to revise and amend was dis-advertisement as wanting a purchaser. It was act bestowed upon the Canadas a form of govern tinctly laid down, not only in the enactments of the stated to be 3-7th's of the half of a sixth. (A laugh.) ment assimilated to that prevailing in other colones, act itself, but likewise in the express declarations, Another lot was stated to be a 4th of a 10th of a —namely, one of popular representation. By this recorded in a manner which left no doubt of their 6th; another the 11th of the 4th of the 5th of a 6th; Act the right of controlling and appropriating the 18th authenticity and of the eminent persons who intro- and another, the 44th of the 5th of a 6th. (Laughter.) venue, derived from imposts on commerce, was 16 duced it. Mr. Pitt, who introduced the bill, stated It was quite impossible, under such a system, for served to the Colonial Legislature. One subject that there was nothing contained in it which might an individual to know to whom he owed service; which the Act had in contemplation, was to divide not be altered as circumstances should require, and and yet each person helding land owed service, in Canada into two separate provinces. It was com he expressly applied that declaration to that part some shape or other, to the abstract being who was sidered desirable to invite into Canada, the loyalist of the measure which assigned a certain portion of thus subdivided. Very shortly after the treaty of and other parties who had suffered for this country land for the maintenance of the Church. The house 1763, the King of England issued a Proclamation, during the unfortunate contest in North America was, therefore, at liberty to consider the act in by which he invited his subjects to settle in the now the United States. These persons were question as it would any other act which was found newly acquired country, and in that document the vited to settle in the upper part of the province to be imperfect, and the alteration of which would sovereign declared that he would grant to it, as soon where there were no seignories, no feudal system tend to improve the condition of the community to as possible, a Legislative Assemby; and further, and no French language spoken, and there to 1011 which it was applied. It was fortunate, there could that he would give it all the benefit of the British a separative government. By the constitution the be no doubt, that the Parliament of this country had Law and Courts of Judicature. In 1774 the given to Canada, the lower province was to en the supreme power of dealing with difficulties of this British Courts of Judicature were, as far as pos- the right of sending 50 representatives to the Holl nature, because he was sure, that standing aloof as sible, introduced into Canada, according to the pro- of Assembly, whilst the upper only enjoyed the rest it did from all party feeling, the warmth of contro- mise made in the Proclamation. The other part of of electing 15 members to represent its interests versy, and the local interests and jealousies which the promise, with respect to the Legislative Assem- that House; which 15 were to be increased in all unfortunately prevailed in different parts of the bly, was not then carried into effect. The fact ber, in proportion as the population of those district community of these colonies, he thought it would was, that owing to the situation of the provinces in increased. come to such a judgment and decision as, first, the neighbourhood of Canada, then belonging to the from an undoubted authority to interfere, and sec- British Crown, it was not thought desirable to try command in that colony, who was, he believed, secure the co-operation and assistance of the native thise a da, in portion privile

others

bers;

but a

fortun of dis

Canao havin banks

the m

whilst

iories

merce

St. L. pled b

trict '

popul mane portio effect

chan

repre

try w

alwa

adva

place

the I

the 1

belie

the s

exce

of th

none

more

then

have

have

vinc

elud

that

In co

in re

been to the

wher

tion

the !

it w

privi iorie

in th

resp this

Leg

rest

Eng

enfo

cou

in t

Fre

to t

ou

of

ter

tei

the

The gallant officer then having the supress