

GARIBALDI.

Garibaldi, who seems to be a good deal more than a match for General Urban, has defeated the Austrians under that officer at Canonica, a town on the Adda, just at the junction of that stream with the Brembo, and on the high road from Milan to Bergamo.

RUSSIA.

The Russian Government has addressed a diplomatic circular to its agents throughout Europe, respecting the wishes of the Cabinet of St. Petersburg with regard to the Italian war.

FRENCH ACCOUNT OF THE BATTLE OF MAGENTA.

The Moniteur publishes an account of the battle of Magenta—

Head-quarters, San Martino, June 5.

The French army assembled round Alessandria had great difficulties to overcome. If it marched on Piacenza it would have had to besiege that fortress and force a passage of the Po, there 900 metres in width, and that difficult operation would have had to be effected in presence of a hostile army of 200,000 men.

On the 2nd of June a division of the Imperial Guard was advanced towards Turbigo, on the Ticino, and, not finding any resistance, it threw three bridges across. The Emperor having received confirmatory intelligence that the enemy had withdrawn to the left bank of the river, ordered the Ticino to be crossed at the point by the corps-d'armee of General M'Mahon, followed on the morrow by a division of the Sardinian army.

Our troops had scarcely taken position on the Lombard bank when they were attacked by an Austrian corps from Milan, brought up by the railway. They drove it back victoriously in presence of the Emperor.

The 4th of June had been fixed by the Emperor for the definitive occupation of the left bank of the Ticino. General M'Mahon's corps-d'armee, strengthened by the division of the Voltiguers of the Imperial Guard, and followed by the whole army of the King of Sardinia, was to advance from Turbigo on Buffalora and Magenta, while the division of the Grenadiers of the Imperial Guard was to carry the tete-de-pont of Buffalora on the left bank, and Marshal Canrobert's corps-d'armee was to advance along the right bank to cross at the same point.

At Magenta the combat was terrible. The enemy defended the village most obstinately. Both sides felt that it was the key of the position. Our troops took it house by house, causing immense loss to the Austrians. More than 10,000 men were put hors de combat, and General M'Mahon took about 5,000 prisoners, including one whole regiment, the 2nd Chasseurs a pied, commanded by Colonel Hauser. But the General's corps suffered considerably; 1,500 men were either killed or wounded. In the attack on the village General Espinasse and his officier d'ordonnance, Lieutenant Froidefond, were both killed. While leading on their men, Colonel Drouhot, of the 65th of the Line, and Colonel Chabriens, of the 2nd, fell mortally wounded.

On the other side Vinoy's and Renault's divisions were doing prodigies of valour, under the orders of Marshal Canrobert and General Niel. Vinoy's division, which had left Novara in the morning, had scarcely reached Trerate, where it purposed to bivouac, when it was sent for by the Emperor. It advanced at quick step as far as the bridge of Magenta, driving the enemy from the positions they occupied, taking above 1,000 prisoners; but, engaged with superior forces, it suffered heavy loss—eleven officers were killed and fifty wounded; 650 non-commissioned officers and men were placed hors de combat. The 85th of the Line suffered most. Colonel Delort fell at the head of his men, and all the officers were wounded. General Martimprey received a bullet wound while leading on his brigade.

Marshall Canrobert's troops also suffered considerably. Colonel de Busserville, the chief of his staff, was killed at his side; Colonel Charlier, of the 90th, fell mortally wounded by five bullets, and many officers of Renault's division were placed hors de combat, while the village and bridge of Magenta were taken and re-taken seven times.

Finally, about half-past eight at night, the French army remained masters of the field of battle, and the enemy withdrew, leaving in our hands four guns, one of which was taken by the Grenadiers of the Guard, two flags, and 7,000 prisoners. The number of Austrians placed hors de combat may be estimated at 20,000; 12,000 musket and 30,000 sacs (knapsacks?) were found on the battle field.

The Austrian corps which fought against us are those of Clam-Gallas, Zobel, Schwarzenberg, and Lichtenstein. Field-Marshal Gyalai commanded in person.

Thus, five days after their departure from Alessandria, the allied army had given three combats, gained a battle, cleared Piedmont of the Austrians and opened the gates of Milan. Since the combat of Montebello the Austrian army has lost 25,000 men in killed and wounded, 10,000 prisoners and seventeen guns.

AUSTRIAN ACCOUNT OF THE BATTLE OF MAGENTA.

The following is the Austrian account of the battle. A report of Count Gyalai to his Majesty the Emperor of Austria, closes with the following:—

"The enemy having been driven back to Magenta, an orderly retreat was made. I believe I can confidently conclude that the enemy, in spite of his superiority, paid a high price for the possession of Magenta, and that he will do your Majesty's army the justice to acknowledge that it did not yield to a brave and numerically superior force until after a heroic contest.

"I am not able to give any nearer details concerning the action, as, under the circumstances, timely returns from the different troops could not be required. I believe to be near the truth in saying that we had between 4,000 and 5,000 killed and wounded, and that the enemy certainly had half as many more. Lieutenant-General Baron Reichschach was shot through the hip, and Generals Lebelztern and Durfield through the arm. I will not neglect to forward to your Majesty a more detailed account as soon as the separate reports have come in, and to mention the names of those who particularly distinguished themselves."

THESE THINGS ARE AN ALLEGORY.—We read the following in a North country paper:—

"Curious Story of a Cat.—In the village of Tottingham, near Bury, at the house of Mr. Adam Brooks, sexton, may be witnessed a curious instance of feline attachment. A cat, which has a kitten three weeks old, about a week ago caught a mouse, but instead of devouring the little creature, according to the old established custom, she brought it to the kitten, and they are living together on the most affectionate terms. Puss evinces an extraordinary affection for it, and appears disconsolate should the mouse be out of her sight. It is delightful to witness the fearlessness with which the mouse trusts itself in the hands of its natural enemy, nestling itself for hours in its breast, running up and down its body, and evincing the most unbounded confidence in its new friend; whilst the cat, if possible, lavishes greater attention on it than on its own offspring. Hundreds go daily to witness this curious exhibition, and go away surprised and delighted."

Surely the editor is palming off an allegory upon us under the guise of an anecdote. What can be plainer?

The Cat is Louis Napoleon. The Kitten is Victor Emmanuel. The Mouse is Italy. Nothing can exceed the attachment of Cat and Kitten to Mouse—so far— But wait till Puss is hungry.
