THE CHRISTIAN MESSENGER.

Hon. PROV. SECRETARY. said nothing could be more fair or more wise, as he thought, than the speech to which they had just listened .--

There was no doubt that a great deal of time was wasted the last session, and he had no doubt ley, P. Smyth, Ross, Martell, Wier. that their debates could be shortened and their business more rapidly despatched. He thought they should save time, if the opposition would be content to adopt the mode suggested by the hon. member. On the question of Education, he said when he left for England, the census returns were not all in, and since his retu n he had had no opportunity to give them a careful examina- fin, Bourinot, Hefferman, Wade, Burgess, tion. In 1841, he brought forward a system of education, and urged that the country should Financial Secretary, Killam, Morton. be assessed to maintain it, and some years later, he did not remember the precise year, he introduced the same measure again; but both times was beaten by a majority of two thirds. He looked forward, however, to an improvement in this respect, and he was not sure that the house would not, before the close of the session, be in- Campbell. vited to consider some measure looking to an improvement in the laws relating to education.

Hon. Mr. Johnston referred in an 'eloquent McDonald, Townsend. manner to the death of Prince Albert, which and that sympathy was not confined to the territory over which her sovereignty extends, but Province-such as the Registrar of Deedsworld.

ted? They saw, in the history of that illus. of youth strong and ardent, placed in a position whatever way would be most advisable. in which the possession of rank, and fortune, and power, opened the way for the indulgence of his passions; and they saw the magnanimity and self- denial, with which he restrained those passions, and brought them into subjection to the sacred calls of duty. At an age when most young men hardly feel the responsibilities of life, he assumed responsibilities of the most grave and weigh y character; and how did he fulfil them ? Placed in a position the most delicate, perhaps, in which a man could be placed-a sovereign's husband, without a sovereign's power-he yielded at once to the constitutional restraints of his position, and rendered to his sovereign his assistance, his advice, and his protection.

Who could tell the extent of the benefits that would result from his exertions in moulding the characters, dispositions and pursuits of his children, in whose characters and habits the nation's interests are so much involved ! Who could tell the amount of loss which our Queen and her children had sustained in the death of such a husband and father!

FRIDAY, Feb. 14th.

On the second clause of the address being read.

Hon. Mr. Johnston spoke on the death of the Prince Consort.

Hon. Provincial Secretary made a very few remarks on the same subject and promised to do his best to preserve the harmony and good feeling with which the session had commenced. - Sonie discussion arose on the subject of reporting the debates. The members of government generally, wished to have no paid reporter, but the Opposition contended that if no authorized reporter were employed, garbled and partizan reports would go forth to the country without giving any opportunity for the people to know what was the truth; and further that Mr. Bourinot had depended on the past year's engagement and had engaged a competent assistant and it would be unfair now to refuse to enter into arrangements with him without compensation. The matter was left with a Committee to report upon at an early day.

Dr. Tupper spoke of the Finances of the country and thought quarterly Returns should be published for the information of the public. Hon. Financial Secretary said that there was not sufficient force in his office to enable him to Codfish, large, per qtl..... 2 75 a do more than was now done.

Mr. McFarlane enquired when the bill in reference to Gold mining would be brought forward.

Hon. Prov. Secretary said that the Gold Bill and the papers relating to that subject would be before the house next week.

Saturday, Feb. 15th.

At half past two the House, in a body, proceeded to Government House with the Address. On their return various Despatches were laid on the table. Steps were taken to prepare an Address of Condulence to Her Majesty, from both branches of the Legislature.

Monday, Feb. 17th.
