Dr. Hamilton said there were two points which required the consideration of the house. One was to legalize the action taken under the set, and the other, to provide such simple machinery as will enable schools to be established for the next six months in sections that wished them. He would go further and say that any majority in a district should have a right to build school houses, and support schools, and to forrow money therefor. If the individuals agreed upon subscription, let it be collected, tut assessment should not be resorted to.

After some further desultory discussion, Mr. Archibald's amendment was put, and lost by a large majority. Mr. McDonnell's amendment was also lost by Hon. Prov. Sec. expressed his surprise at the mode in which gentlemen were disposed to approach the question under consideration. The louse, on the previous evening, had settled the policy, and yet gentlemen wished them to nultify that action. He was astonished to hear the honourable member for Guysboro declare that he was not going to assist the government in this matter, but to sink down into a mere attitude of faction; such a position would not gain that hon, member much credit among the people of this country.

The repairs and improvement reflect oredit on all concerned. We have now a neat, respectable and comfortable building in which to worship God. Special services have been held every day since, with some encouragement.

Last evening we were agreeably interrupted in our series of meetings by a request to meet at the residence of James Johnson, Esq, of Lower Granville, in order to receive a Donation given. The evening was delightfully spent. The devotional exercises were remarkably interresting. Rev. G. D. Cox, of Clements, was Mr. Blanchard thought they might allow the present, and by his warm-hearted and stirring address, added much to the pleasure of the evening. Other brethren also addressed the meeting. This donation, together with that received at the Parsonage a few weeks since, amounted to $129. I feel truly grateful for these expressions of sympathy and good-will, and pray that God's richest blessings may deseend upon the donors.
