THE CHRISTIAN MESSENGER.

The Bible affords us much authority for the Inquisition as it does for such a Court as that suggested by the Christian Visitor. It such a court as that proposed by Brother Bill were instituted, would the churches have entire confidence in its assumed infallibility? And should imagination be so far stretched as to suppose that the proposed court might possibly err in any of its exalted decisions, would not a still higher tribunal of appeal (if such could be found) be required to rectify its possible errors?

My own opinion, Brother Selden, is, that the New Testament is sufficiently explicit in its divinely appointed directions in matters of discipline, to guide churches in the most trying circumstances and difficulties. Human wisdom can never rise higher than the Divine. Depend upon it, the Great Head of the Church has constituted the only reliable tribunal for the discipline of its members. When any body-be he Editor, clergyman, or private christian-presumptuously imagines that his wisdom transcends that which illuminates every page of the Oracles of Truth, he is under that influence which has too often deformed and darkened the practices as well as corrupted the purity, of that which bears the name of Christianity.

I am an old man-and have long been familiar with the workings of our Baptist churches in these Provinces and elsewhere-yet have] never known an instance in which wrong has been done to either Minister or private member in being disciplined according to New Testament directions. Innovations are not always sate.

IN MEMORIAM.

DEBORAH W. TOOKER,

Youngest daughter of Rev. J. B. Nortonswas born at Barrington, Shelburne Co., Sept. 26th, 1833. Her brief life was drawn through various scenes. At six years of age she removed, with ber parents, to Cornwallis. At fourteen she was born again ; and united with the Free Baptist Church at Habitant, Cornwallis. In Dec. 1854 she was married to Mr. James Kinsman, then a merchant at Canning; afterwards a preacher of Christ in the Free Baptist connection. In Feb. 1859 she was left a widow with three children. In Nov. 1861 she became the wife of Rev. J. F. Tooker, who was then a student at Wolfville. In 1863 she joined the Baptist church at North Sydney, C. B. And there, also, buried an infant the same year. Thence she removed to Pereaux, Cornwallis: then to Digby : and finally to Port. Medway ; where she died on the 23rd of Dec. 1867: leaving in all, six children : the youngest an infant of eight days.

As the writer occupied rooms in brother Ray's for years, their acquaintance was intimate, and it was pleasant. He was evidently a dutiful son an affectionate husband, a kind father, and a man universally esteemed. One trait in his character may be mentioned as peculiarly worthy of notice and imitation, namely, his constancy of maintaining prayer in his family when the state of his health permitted. While his aged parents resided with him, his mother, who the writer that her son's earnest prayers were very consoling and animating to her mind.

About five years ago bro. Ray became permanently indisposed. Being an industrious man he had been macifestly declining; and some ten days prior to bis decease a profuse discharge of blood from the mouth indicated approaching disthe 6th and 7th inst., shewed his departure to the aid of the rich blessing God was pleased to be near at hand. He was calm and submissive to the divine will, but expresed a wish that he might not die by strangulation in one of those turns of bleeding. This desire was granted .--A little before his decease he remarked, that his hope was stronger than death. His position being changed according to his request, he said he was quite comfortable, and quietly passed, as we confidently trust, to the mansions of rest, early on the morning of March 9th, 1868, aged 43 years, leaving a sorrewing widow, (who had with great toil and assiduity labored to preserve his life, and to mitigate his sufferings,) and one son, as also aged parents, with numerous other relatives and friends to mourn their loss. The occasion was improved by the Pastorassisted by Rev. T. H. By nature ; she possessed a vigorous and active mind, strong will, proud spirit, and warm merry heart.

In her christian character and life, the work of grace was clearly manifest. She regarded herself as a sinner, utterly dependent for salvation on the mercy of God through Jesus. Her views of God in Christ as her Saviour were clear, full, happy. Her sentiments, from early life were Calvinistic. They developed and strengthened into fair proportions as she advanced in christian knowledge and experience. Her gifts were ot a high order. In prayer; direct, near, glowing. In pious conversation ; ready, pleasing, affecting. Her prayers and conversation with the sick and dying were full of glory and of God. Her social meeting addresses were always interesting, trequently unctuous, eloquent. In holy song she excelled. She loved the service of Christ.

As a helper with her husband in the gospel; "her price was above rubies." The chief ambition of her heart was to see him an able minister of the new covenant. For this she labored, living and dying. By her influence he was induced to return to study at Wolfville, when ill health had discouraged him from either books or preaching. By her encouraging counsel, and self-denying effort, he was enabled to remain at the institutions longer than be could otherwise have done. Subsequently, her cheer, fortitude, and steadiness of sentiment, were, in God's hand, of untold value to him. She acted the part of a gentle faithful critic. Lectures, conversation, sermons, prayers, all underwent her faithful revision, with no little wisdom and taste, with a view to improvement. Accustomed from childbood to life in a minister's home, she was peculiarly fitted for that department of her life-work. She toiled faithfully and successfully to make her home an evergreen oasis. Her husband's plaudit is, Well done.

Of her last sayings, a few only are here quoted. "God is going to take me from you. He will sustain you : and He will take care of my children. This is hard : but it will bring you nearer

Thus David pined, and drooped, and was cut down, All agents failed to reach the fatal spot; Disease had seized its victim, but a crown, And robes of white for him the Saviour wrought.
