BUTTER IN BACKS.

A correspondent of the Rokeford Register, writing from Olmpia, gives the method used on the Pacific Coast for preserving butter :- " I think the dairymen here have an art in the management of butter that might be turned to good account in the east but which I never saw practiced till I came to this coast-I allude to the manner of putting up butter for market. Here such a thing as a butter firkin or a stone jar to pack butter in is unknown; but all butter is packed in muslin sacks, made in such a form that the package when complete, is a cylinder three or four inches in diameter, and from six inches to a foot in length. The butter goes from the churn, as soon as worked over, into the cylindrical bags made fine of bleached muslin. The packages are then put into large casks containing strong brine with a slight admixture of saltpetre, and by means of weights kept always below the surface. The cloth integument always protects the butter from any impurities that chance to come in contract with the package, and being always buried in brine, that protects it from the action of the air; and it has been ascertained by trial that butter put up in this manner will keep sweet longer than in any other way. Besides, it is found easier and cheaper for the manufacturer than to pack either in firking or jars. And for the retailer, there is no telling the advantage on the score of safety and conveniencee. These rolls of butter can lie upon his counter as safe from dust or other contact, as bars of lead; can be rolled up for his customers in a sheet of paper with as much propriety as a bundle of matches. If the customer, when he gets home, discovers speeks of dust upon the outside of the sack, he can throw it into a pail of pure cold water, and take it out clean and white. As he uses the butter from day to day, with a sharp knife he cuts it off from the end of the roll in slices, the thickness to suit his wants peels off the cloth of the end of slice, leaving it in tidy form to place upon the table. This improved manner of packing butter first eaught my eye in the market of San Francisco, where I saw cords of it piled up like pigs of lead. The simplicity and great value of the improvement so impressed me that I wondered the Yankees had not long ago found it out."

OLD BREAD,

A curious discovery has just been made at Pompeli. In a house in course of excavation, an oven was found closed with an iron door, on opening which a batch of eightyone loaves, put in nearly eighteen hundred years ago and now somewhat overbaked, was discovered, and even the large iron shovel with which they were neatly laid in rows. The loaves were but slightly overbaked by the lava heat, having been proteeted by a quantity of ashes covering the door. There is no baker's mark on the loaves; they are circular, about nine inches in diameter, rather flat, and indented (evidently with the baker's elbows) in the centre, and are slightly raised at the sides; and divided by deep lines, radiating from the centre into eight segments. They are now of a deep brown color, and hard, but very light. In the same shop were found 561 bronze and 52 silver coins. A mill with a great quantity of corn in excellent preservation, has also been discovered.

A learned doctor, referring to tightlacing, avers that it is a public benefit, inasmuch as it kills all the foolish girls, and leaves all the wise ones to grow up to be women.

During the cross-examination of a witness, he was asked where his father was. To which, with a melancholy air, he responded : " Dead, sir, -dropped of very sudden, sir." " How came he to drop off suddenly?" was the next question, " Foul play, sir,-the sheriff imposed on his unsuspicious nature, and getting him to go on a platform to look at a select audience, suddenly knocked a small trap-door out from under him, and in falling he got entangled in a rope, from the effects of which he expired.'

A want has been felt and expressed by Physicians, for a safe and reliable purgative; such a want is now supplied in " Parsons' Purgative

Henry K. Bond, of Jefferson, Maine was cured spitting of blood, soreness and weakness of the stomach, by the use of "Johnson's Anodyne Liniment."
