GARDEN WORK.

The great secret of success in having fine vegetables for the table, is in doing everything well. We need not advise our readers, now, in the autumn of the year, on good clean cultivation, proper thinning, &c. A great deal, however, depends on taking up and packing away vegetables for winter in the best manner. Careless cultivators will tumble them into the cellar without being properly cleaned, trimmed or sorted. A part thus decay, and the foul air they create injures the flavor of the rest, and everything else in the apartment. Instead of this objectionable course, let everything be done in the most perfect manner. First let the root cellar be made perfectly clean and sweetwhitewashing the walls will be no injury. Next procure clean boxes for storing the roots, or casks or barrels for those in small quantities.

Now a word in relation to harvesting the crops of vegetables. First if possible, select a clear, warm, dry day, or as near to this as may be. If wet or rainy weather is chosen it will be difficult to remove the earth and clean the roots. Let them lie on the ground for several hours, more or less, when any adhering portions of earth will readily fall from them. Trim neatly, but not too closely, such as require it. Sort and cast all poor specimens aside to be cut up for animals. Then deposit or pack away the good ones properly in the cellar. Some roots, such as beets, are much injured in quality by a little wilting; and it is important to preserve their freshness, and at the same time to prevent moulding. We have found nothing better for effecting this purpose than to fill the interstices among them with fine fresh moss as they are packed

It sometimes happens that fine weather cannot be chosen for this work, and longcontinued rain renders the ground necessarily muddy. In such a case, the best way is to take up the crop and place it on the floor of a barn, where it may remain uninjured for several days. The adhering dirt will become gradually dry and may be readily knocked off, and the roots then taken in a clean condition to the cellar. In fact, this course will always be best where there are heavy or adhesive soils, except during the finest autumns.

TOMATOES.

Use tomatoes largely, both at breakfast and dinner; take them hot or cold, cooked or raw, with vinegar or without vinegar. fried in sugar and butter, or stewed with salt and pepper. Their healthful properties consist in their being nutritious, easily digested, and promotive of that daily regular action of the system without which health is impossible. Their anticonstipating quality is in the seeds; on the same principle that grapes, raisins, and white mustard-seed have stood high in this respect, the attrition of the seeds on the mucous surface of the alimentary canal exciting its peristaltic motion, thus causing regular daily action.

DRY EARTH AS A DEODORIZER.

The employment of dry pulverized earth as a means of deodorizing poultry houses, (says a late number of the London Field), appears to be worthy of more attention than it has hitherto received. The fact that from four hundred to five hundred fowls can, by this aid, be kept in one building for months together, with less smell than is to be found in any ordinary fowl-house capable of accommodating a dozen chickens, is very conclusive as to its efficacy. In the building of the National Company, where this fact has been ascertained, seven or eight fowls are kept in each compartment, twelve feet by three feet, and yet there is no smell or trace of moisture.

CARE OF APPLE TREES .- A Western New York correspondent writes "a word about young apple trees: -Look out for the borers. Wash the bodies of the tree with the strong soap suds; it is excellent for them; but never put on gas tar, it will ruin them."

Camphor is a most powerful agent in driving away mosquitoes. A camphor-bag hung up in an open casement will prove a barrier to their entrance. Camphorated spirits applied as a perfume to the face and hands, will act as an effectual preventive; but when bitten by them, aromatic vinegar is the best antidote.
