It may be a con-schanos to her friends in Nova Scotia to know that among strangers she found ki d friends that cared for her interests. Whipple a desire for religin, attended the social meetings and sought the pracers of the church. Being of a rearing dispositi u she said but little of her fee ings but t' e christian tamily with whom she boarded, with those who saw her most, thought her calm and peaceful manner and christian conduct the result of faith in Christ. In the facid moments of her sickness she enjoyed prayer, singing, and Bible reading, and often said
