Here the question naturally arises, Are we able to do all this? We are thankful that the time has passed when it was necessary seriously to discuss this question. The ability of our people to accomplish this work is fully admitted. While an amount equal to one dollar a member from all our churches would secure the permanency of the College as it is now organized, and a sum equal to two dollars a member would enable us at once to advance to a position where we could safely meet any competition that is likely to be developed in the next fifteen years, it is a shame for us to be stationary and fearful. It ought not to be a difficult thing to find one thousand men each of whom could give one hundred dollars, and this would at once bring the College $100,000. When we call to mind the men here and there, some in almost every one of our communities, who are adding farm to farm, or yearly transacting increasing business in merchandise, who fail to find satisfactory investments at home and are constantly sending money abroad for larger returns, whose ships are floating in all waters and who are receiving by almost every steamer remittances for these ventures abroad, it is amazing that any one should advise delay in any of our great enterprises. The truth is that the property of our people is increasing much more rapidly than their religious teachers are instructing them in the responsibilities of christian stewardship.

But what are the reasons why this work should be done? A great variety of answers rises. I call attention to two classes of considerations, one involving the religious element, the other business prosperity. The first is the connection between the projected Independent Mission and the success of Acadia College. For many years our brethren have been looking forward to the time when this Independent effort might be inaugurated, and you now learn with great satisfaction that a large amount of money stands to your credit in your bank account. But I entreat of you to remember that the vitality and perpetuity of your missionary work is most closely connected with the permanence of a society of students who meet once a month in the College Chapel, to consider the great subject of missionary labor and their personal obligations in connection with it. If you allow your College to be closed, or by its inefficiency force away these young men, your missionary enterprise will fail; for you cannot expect to draw laborers under your supervision from a foreign field, nor is it at all probable that you can find a permanent and increasing supply in any state institution. If you have these laborers, you must find them in our own College. I entreat you, therefore, as you cherish strong interest in the Foreign Mission work, that for the sake of succeeding in this enterprise, you would do what you can, and all that is needed, to make Acadia permanent and efficient.

The time will not allow me to develop, as it should be done, all the reasons why our business men should be especially interested in providing a suitable Endowment for the College. It becomes them especially to consider its is being felt severely in the Northern connection with one fact often deplored | States. He had for many years -since by them, the constant tendency of 1827-occupied a prominent place in are dissatisfied with the old order of that time. things and are aspiring for something A notice in a contemporary says of better, for more intellectual exercise, him:more social cultivation, and more variety of employment, new resources must be opened, greater variety of business developed and better institutions of learning sustained. It may be said that so far as education is concerned, the object can be more economically reached by a state University. But as the facts are, the choice cannot spirit which he so largely diffused through years. be between Acadia and a State Institution. Social and business considerations have long been drawing the young men of our congregations across the border to another country. The more expensive institutions there really attract our students more than all the the lessons that he learned from the lips of competing institutions in our own field. Dr. Eaton. All over the West, off to the So that the true question for us to consider is whether we shall provide liberal and satisfactary privileges for our youth in our own College, or allow them to pass over the line to be educated in the institutions of another people. What this last proposition means, the experience of the past fifteen years makes sufficiently clear.

subsistence and selfish enjoyment, they will leave no history of great achievements to be cherished by the generations who follow them; but if they comprehend the greatness of the work now awaiting their efforts, and are faithful to the important interests now in their trust, in the year to come, as the sons and the sons' sons shall stand on the College Hill, overlooking the lovely Bay of Minas and that beautiful and fertile valley, and shall gaze upon the stately Halls that will have been there erected and the commodious and tasteful grounds consecrated to christian education, and shall call to mind what has there been done and what will continue to be done, to bless the world, their spontaneous tribute of veneration and affection will be: the fathers when they laid the foundations of these institutions and nourished their growth, knew what they were doing: Blessings be on their memories. After others, had spoken the Hon.

S. L. Tilley, being present, was invited to speak, which he did with his usual eloquence choosing in particular to notice the importance of making provision at home for the religious and general education of young men; and shewing the consequences of their going to another country to finish their course of Collegiate study. After the hou. gentleman's speech an opportunity was afforded for a commencement of the effort to enlarge the Endowment. Several brethren and friends of the College from different parts of Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, and P. E. Island, offered to give $100 in case ster St. Baptist Church, commencing at one thousand persons could be found 7.30 o'clock. willing to do the same. Others came forward and offered $100 in four annual payments without conditions. Hon. Mr. Tilley endorsed his speech 1872-73, is composed of the following :-$100. He felt that he might do it, seeing that his election was now over. The total of these sums amounted to $3300.00, a fair start for the friends who have consented to become agents in this effort. The session was then brought to a close by prayer and the benediction by the Moderator.

Next morning, Tuesday, the railway accommodation was taxed to its utmost to bring the friends away from St. Stephen, notwithstanding that a large number had gone in the steamer for St. John via Eastport.

On Wednesday morning we were again united at St. John, on board the good steamer Empress, and came out in good style, accompanied by the New Brunswick for Boston, the two keeping abreast of each other in a contest of speed for two or three miles. The latter boat had to give way after a little pleasant excitement.

This gathering was no exception to the usual experience we enjoy proving that the injunction "Use hospitality' is not yet out of date. Baptists, Methodists, Presbyterians and Churchmen were alike, ready to receive the brethren, and the result has been that many kind and pleasant associations have been formed between the extreme West | the Presbyterian Church of Victoria, Austrlia. and other parts of the Maritime Pro-

As a theological teacher, Dr. Eaton created in the candidates for the ministry a lofty zeal for their work.
