

Such an omission can hardly have been accidental.

What is it to us if other churches possessing a less perfect creed, perhaps in your own city Mr. Editor, may even almost double our own offerings for all purposes. That need not trouble us. From our lofty platform of unsullied purity in faith and doctrine, we can afford to look down on their greater progress in more practical, not to say pecuniary, effort with feelings of unruffled serenity.

There is another point worthy of attention. Some have attempted to educe from 1 Cor. 16. 2, a rule for giving on the basis of "ability" or "prosperity." But however that may have suited the days of Paul, it is clearly unfitted for the strange conditions of our time. Any serious attempt to carry it out at present would prove ruinous.

It is your duty, wealthier brethren, to disregard a principle which if acted on, would fill the Lord's treasury to such repletion as would at once relieve our poorer ones of that keen stimulus of necessity which now forces them to give, and compels them to experience the truth of the saying "it is more blessed to give than to receive."

Do not put them in any danger of missing so rich a blessing. The great majority of our number being in humble circumstances, and probably nearly all holding the opinions I am in this feeble way setting forth, would doubtless at once avail themselves of your too profuse generosity as an opportunity of laying aside the burden altogether. Do not give them any excuse for declining to make a sacrifice so needful for their spiritual good. Some think there is no way of showing the sincerity of our devotion to any cause or principle so convincing as the extent of the sacrifice, pecuniary, or otherwise, we are willing to make on its behalf.

That must be one of those half truths declared now-a-days to be so peculiarly noxious. It may indeed be true in regard to that moiety for whom a gift of a dollar or two is a real sacrifice, and means a doing without of some home comfort or luxury, but it is obviously untrue of those whose large and generous contributions mean nothing but a cheese-parting from the fortunes a kind Providence has enabled them to lay up for their children.

To our poorer brethren I need only say: Follow the example which will doubtless be set you by those of larger means, and who cannot help listening to the pleas. I venture to offer, enforced as they are by every dictate of prudence, and evincing a wisdom almost judicial in its calm and crystal clearness.

It is true I am unable to offer any direct passage from Scripture in support of the views now advocated. Like many other principles and practices they might be based on the general tone and tenor of the whole word. But in truth, appealing as I do to the common-sense of your readers, they need no such extraneous support.

The proverbial canniness of the Scot has commanded the admiration if not approval of mankind.

Surely if any virtue is so highly commended when exercised in the mere worldly affairs of any people, how much more justly ought it to be esteemed when acted on in regard to the higher concerns of the christian church.

RELIGIOUS INTELLIGENCE.

ANAPOLIS, 20th May, 1876.—Dear Sir, We desire to acknowledge the goodness of God towards this locality.

We have two very interesting Sunday Schools, one in Annapolis conducted by Bro. J. L. Britain, another at Round Hill superintended by Bro. Anderson Healey. They are both growing in interest and doing a good work for the Master.

Since I last wrote, seventeen have been added to our number, thirteen by baptism and four by letter. Yesterday May 28th, was a day of special interest to us. At the close of the morning service in Annapolis three received the right hand of fellowship. And at Round Hill in the afternoon eleven were baptized. These with two others on letters of dismission received the right hand of fellowship at the close of the evening service.

We desire to give all the glory to God, that he has seen fit to use as his instruments, in this good work at Round Hill, the earnest and devoted teachers in the Sunday School. Their intense desire for the salvation of the young people committed to them, has been very manifest for some time past. And God has rewarded their zeal by answering their prayers. Yesterday teachers and pupils rejoiced together.

We ask the prayers of all who believe that God answers prayer that the work of grace may deepen and extend till many more are brought to Christ.

Yours in Christ,
T. A. HIGGINS.

SHELBURNE COUNTY.—I had much joy in welcoming by baptism another dear sister into Sand Point and Jordan Bay Church. Others will come shortly.

I spent a very pleasant four days on a preaching and visiting mission in Osborne and vicinity recently. The social intercourse, the conference, and Lord's Supper were seasons of special enjoyment. They speak loudly of the piety of many of those dear brothers and sisters in Jesus to whom we were before strangers. How much they need a faithful and self-denying pastor. A larger congregation could not be gathered in Shelburne County. They will raise a good support for a good man of God. Is there not some young man who will prove the temper of His Jerusalem blade by engaging in the Lord's battle on this field?

On the Sunday previous to the above there were 28 baptized (not 30 as before announced) the other two were received by letter. This makes a total of 44 baptized and 46 received into the membership of the church.
