CRACKS IN A CAST-IRON STOVE may be closed by using the following mixture: Good wood ashes are to be sifted through a fine sieve, to which is to be added the same quantity of clay finely pulverised, together with a little salt. This mixture is to be moistened with water enough to make a paste, and the crack of the stove then filled with it. The cement does not peal off or break away, and assumes an extreme degree of hardness after being heated. The stove must be cool when the application is made.

SCIENCE.

CAUSES OF RAIN .- There are a Cut in quarters a year-old, well-fed number of causes co-operating in the production of rain. 1. The rising of pot with the body bones, two pounds heated air from the earth, and rarefaction, which produces cold. On the little salt; set on the fire, boil slowly, summits of lofty mountains clouds and skim well, garnish with a carrot, an on- mists settle or remain stationary, while ion, two leeks and two stalks of celery: | the currents of the wind below, striking let simmer on the side of the fire till the side of the mountain, rise upward the chicken and veal are well done; and causes a lower temperature-and wash well half a pint of barley, cook it rain as the effect. 2. Cold and hot thoroughly with a quart of the broth, currents, heavy with vapour, mixing put in a soup tureen with a sufficient together, become of one temperature quantity of chicken broth, freed of its and cannot hold the same quantity of moisture. 3. The wind or air in motion, when it comes in contact with the and nourishing soup for convalescents, earth, causes the condensation of vapour and precipitates rain. In the winter season the temperature is often 34 degrees, and when this is the case, a be served with a sauce made with some south-west wind will cause it to rise 20 of the broth thickened with butter and degrees in thirty-six or forty-eight hours. This air, saturated with humidity, at 54 degrees will produce rain.

Winds being the natural agents which combine cold and warm currents of air, rain will fall more frequently where winds are shifting or variable. The constant winds moving over the deserts of Sahara cannot bring rain till they meet with an obstruction, as a mountain, the effect of which will change the current and mix the cold and hot air together. A vast amount of vapour rises from the surface of the oceans, and being distributed by the winds to the different parts of the globe, becomes the fountains of rain over the various continents. The hot air which ascends at the equator becomes saturated with vapour as it passes over the northern and southern oceans, and as it rises and spreads over the temperate zones, it falls as rain over the earth.

The quantity of rain-fall in the tropics is greater than it is towards the poles, because as the air increases in temperature its quantity of vapour also increases. There are great differences in the quantity of rain-fall in the same latitude, from local causes.

The greatest quantity of rain-fall on record at the Himalaya mountains was 660 inches in depth in one year.

In its history, this invaluable Medicine occupies the most honourable position possible for any remedy to attain. A few years since it was known only to the friends and neighbors and patients of the proprietors, and always sought for by them whenever troubled with Rheuma-tism, and in this way came to the notice of physicians generally, and through their favorable expression, and its acknow ledged value as a Rheumatic Remedy, the demand for it became so frequent and urgent as to oblige its proprietors to in-crease their facilities for its manufacture. Its reputation rapidly extended, and soon orders, letters of enquiry, letters of thanks, and certificates of praise were daily received from all sections of the United States and Canada; and in this way on a basis of its merit alone-unaidded by "tricks of the trade" or special efforts it has risen to its present envious position. Wherever introduced it has received the most flattering preference in the treatment of all rheumatic complaints. enables the operator to sew by night as In this we are really grateful and happy well as day.
