

THE EASTERN WAR AND PALESTINE.

When we mentioned in our last the possibility of the question of the future of Palestine being mixed up with the settlement of the Turkish war affairs, we did so without knowing that the subject had already been under discussion. We find the London Free-man referring to this matter in a half-facetious spirit under the caption "The last guess of the riddle." Here is what it says:

A very curious rumor has been current in some of the West-end clubs during the last few days. It is neither more nor less than that our mysterious Prime Minister proposes the annexation of the Holy Land to the British Crown. Had the reader enjoyed the confidence of one of those omniscient gentlemen, who, spending half their time in club-houses, find the sole object of their existence in seeking after and secretly circulating some new thing, and asked him the news, he might have found himself led by the button into a corner and put through a catechism somewhat as follows:—Everybody knows the Turkish Empire is now broken up. Do you not suppose that we shall pick up some of the pieces? The sick man is dead. Ought we not to take some share of the intestate effects? Would not the seizure of Jerusalem be fame for ever for my Lord Beaconsfield? Who would say nay? Would not the romance of such a step have a mighty influence? Would it not open up an immense commerce with the East that would revive the trade of our country? Would not a certain newspaper, with an immense circulation, and inspired by Jews, and whose readers have shown themselves ready to believe any absurdity it may advance, lend its influence to such a measure? Would it not provide a host of good appointments? Does not everybody know that Palestine under good government would prove a mine of untold wealth?

Would it not be a check on whatever power was at Constantinople, secure us the key of the Suez Canal, and the chief roads to India? Is not the third lion on the British shield asserted by heraldists to be the lion of the tribe of Judah, and an assertion of an ancient right to reign in Jerusalem? Is it not a fact that the Government have recently given orders for a number of maps of Palestine on a large scale? Then, with this crowning assertion and a knowing wink, the conversation would be closed with the judicious but not very original counsel to wait and see.

Let not our readers suppose that we give credence to rumours like these. But the fact is, that so long as we have such leaders our only forecast is to be prepared for surprises. That such an idea might catch public opinion is just possible. How our millenarian prophetic friends would crow! They have been telling us ever so long that the time, times, and half-time of Daniel express in our time that the land shadowing with wings is England, that the vessels of bulrushes are the P. and Q. Company's steamers; that by the drying up of the Euphrates is meant the downfall of Turkey; that by the kings of the East is meant Queen Victoria. Still we acknowledge that we have not been able to see it, and fail to see it now; but we are alarmed to think of the flood of lectures on unfulfilled prophecy this proposal may let loose, should it ever be seriously entertained.

From the Acadia Athenaeum.
"Acadia still lives,"—and prospers.
"Cast down, but not destroyed."

The ruins still continue to smoke; so do some of the depraved Juniors.

Acadia College, as it was, will be found represented on the cover of last number. Acadia College as it is, will be found under the poplar tree in the back yard. Acadia College, as it will be, stands fair and beautiful, though indistinct, on the slope of '78-'79, like a castle on the brow of a hill, draped in the gray mist of morning.

Why cannot some enterprising photographer or travelling artist come this way and take a view of the ruins before the profane pick-axe and the unsympathetic crowbar destroy them. Such a view would form a first-rate embellishment to some future illustrated history of Acadia.

Mr. Jacob Schurman, one of our old students, who obtained the Gilchrist scholarship, has just obtained the highest honors in Logic and Moral Philosophy. He also won a scholarship of £50 sterling a year, but as he is over the specified age, he gained nothing by this.

The Acadia Athenaeum held its first meet of the term on January 18. The following are the officers elected:

President.—Truman Bishop.
Vice-President.—A. J. Denton.
Recording Secy.—A. C. Chute.
Corresponding Secy.—W. P. Shafner.

Treasurer.—A. Pineo.
Critic.—G. W. Cox.

The interest in the Society was well kept up last term, and we hope that it will not be allowed to flag during the remainder of the year.

A friend in need is a friend in deed. That is the kind of friends we have in Wolfville. Not particularly demonstrative as long as everything moves on prosperously and there is no special call for demonstration, but ready to stretch out a helping hand in the hour of adversity, in the dark and cloudy day. We might cite their action at the Educational Meeting, of Dec. 6th, but we speak specially, just now of the kindness shown to the students, both of the College and Seminary, who were turned out of house and home by the fire.

Inquirer.

The above question tells us what the person referred to is not, but it does not say what he is,—whether he is a member of, and responsible to, any other church or no. If he be not a member of any church, he is not living according to Baptist order, although he may be otherwise living.

A.

Everything that kindness could suggest or hospitality conceive to make the days of our sojourn pleasant was done, and in spite of the sadness which would crop over us at times when we remembered that Acadia was in ashes, we can say that few weeks have been spent more pleasantly than the week after the fire which we passed among our friends in need in the village. And so long as we remember Acadia College and the night of Dec. 2nd 1877, we will also remember, as the silver lining to the cloud, the generous, kindliness of those who opened their hearts and homes to us in our day of trouble.
