Miscellaneous.

There is a new and wonderful violinist in Italy, and what do you think? She is a little girl named Tui, only ten years old. Her father was a very poor man, but he loved to play the violin, as her mother did the guitar. When Tui was only three years old she taught herself to play her father's violin, and at four could do it so much better than he that all the people were astonished. When she was seven she arrived in Paris. There she was brought to Massart, who was so struck with her precocious talent, that he at once offered to take her into the Conservatoire. To this the father objected, but the sensation which the child created was such that a subscription was opened to secure the parent's existence during the time of her apprenticeship. She has now left the conservatoire, a phenomenon, and gone to Milan where she gave crowded concerts. Very likely she will be brought to this country, after she has been tried in England.

George Renton was a poor man; and often said, "If I was rich, I would show people how to give." In a dream, he saw a pyramid of dollars; all new, bright and beautiful. Just then a voice said to him, "Now is your time! You are rich at last; show your generosity!" So he arose from his seat and went to the pile to take some money for charitable purposes. But the pyramid was so perfect that he could not bear to break it; he walked all around it, but found no place where he could take a dollar without spoiling the heap. So he decided that the pyramid should not be broken!  He then awoke—awoke to know himself, and to see that he would be generous while comparatively poor.—Home Circle.
