IT will be seen on our third page that we have had a request from three of the Governors of Acadia College to republish the letters of J. W. Barss, Esq., and Rev. Dr. Saunders' repliee thereto in reference to the appointment of Dr. Rand to the Chair of Education in Acadia College. It will not be necessary for us to do more than call attention to these to secure for them a reading. In doing this it will be necessary that we should observe al.o that Dr. Sawyer and Prof. Higgins have written respecting this matter. Their letters are very brief but it would be unfair to our readers to publish the former without these. We very much regret this whole matter. It is to be lamented that our suggestion offered some weeks since was not adopted, seeing that we should be better able to judge of the value of lic officer in the management of schools, this appointment, after the arrangement of the Curriculum, and after Dr. Rand had given some public statement of his intentions in respect to filling the place assigned to him.

tiringand loyal service in the educational work. But over and beyond the services, perhaps of all other classes the Teachers excepted, have been those rendered by Boards of Trustees, especially in the larger districts embracing the cities and incorporated towns. The public services rendered in this capacity by many of the first men of the Province have not only been without pecuniary reward, but are altogether beyond such reward. The system of elementary education in New Brunswick is in many and most respects superior, I believe, to that of any other Province of Canada. I have no hesitation in saying this, as I have personal knowledge of typical-schools east of Manitoba. The establishment of chairs of education in the universities and colleges is one of the means to be relied on in the future for leavening the directive minds of society with intelligent views of the nature and greatness of the teach er's work. If all clergymen and doctors and lawyers, and others filling high professional positions, really had knowledge of the conditions under which all true teaching is possible, and what, in general, it is a true teacher must know and do in order to achieve high success in his profession, society would, in one generation, grandly enlarge its views of the value of the services rendered by teachers, and of the absolute necessity of securing and retaining in the work men of the first abilities-both by natural endowment and liberal culture. Canadian citizenship makes constant demands upon the individual for a knowledge of educational principles in his capacity of parent, or as voter, or pub-

In our last we gave a telegraphic report of the complimentary dinner given to Dr. Rand, at Fredericton, N.B., on Thursday week. We have since a much fuller report. We regret that it did not come to hand sooper, so that we might have given more space to shew our readers what was then said and done. Such heavy demands are made on our columns this week in the way of correspondence that we are obliged to limit. our extracts of what Dr. Rand and his friends said on the subject.

Chief Justice Allen, the chairman, in introducing the name of Dr. Rand, said

Dr. Rand came here in 1871, the year that the School Bill was introduced and so successfully carried through by his friend, Mr. Justice King. To the energy and ability of Dr. Rand was due the organization of the present school system under that act, and he could testify to the amount of work Dr. Rand had done. He was in the habit of sitting up quite late, and often had seen a light burning late at night in the Doctor's office. It was due toDr. Rand's energy and application that the schools of the country had been brought up to their present high position; and this work had not been accomplished without opposition. Some had opposed taxation altogether-even some of his brother Judges. He did not pretend to say that the system had given general satisfaction. No system ever did. Some were of opinion that it was encumbered with too much machinery-others that there was too much expense in connection with the carrying out of the plan This, however, was not his own opinion. He had not come here to express his opinion. He firmly believed every good citizen would regret the departure of Dr. Rand, yet they would be pleased to know that he had taken a position that, to a great extent, would relieve him of the drudgery and soutine of office work, and one in which he might spend the last years of his life with much more ease and satisfaction to himself.

properly withold from their courses of instruction that which meets a need once so great and so common, In resigning the office which I have had the honor to hold for the past twelve years, I have done so to accept the Chair of Education very heartily tendered to me by the Senate and Governors of Acadia College. The establishing of such a chair is the first act in this Dominion tending to give university recogreceived the Fredericton Capital, with nition to the teaching profession. It is an attempt to bridge the hiatus which has so long existed between the higher and the lower work of education. Chairs of Education, already established in many institutions in other countries, are the modern means of diffusing a sympathetic and healthful influence from the university to elementary schools. If has always been my mislortune or good fortune to have pioneer work to do. The introduction of the free school sys-Brunswick are examples. Prejudices arising from manifold misconceptions hindered the good work. So now, I observe that the action of the Senate this new Chair of Education, is unfavorably criticised by some of the constituents of the college. They do not see the necessity for such a chair, and are entirely confident that its establishment not be expected that such a grand forward movement could be made without awakening the hostile criticism of many and even, perhaps, the determined opposition of some, for antagonism is the dent and all the faithful brotherhood." condition of progress. I do not, of course, rejoice in the opposition manifested, but it will, I trust, furnish me an opportunity of showing these gentlemen that they are mistaken.

She spoke of the exclusion to which women were subjected, only women being allowed to visit them in their zenanas, so that the mission was essentially a woman's work. The In referring to Dr. Rand's departure Mohammedan religion she discovered, when brought into actual contact with it, be the direst and most obstinate of the enemies of God. Mohammedan parents hold a great influence over their children. Very touchingly she told how she had obtained great consolation in her labours from the love and affection of the women she visited. There Dr. Rand, in his own speech, with are now so many women connected with great good taste, preterred to dwell the church at Delhi that they constitute one-half of the whole assembly. In India there are one hundred and twenty millions of women secluded (rom the voice of men. There is no opportunity Kostlin's and other extensive biografor them to hear the Word of God except women take it to them. This mission claims the warmest support. It was one of the greatest claims that ever came upon the Church in England. The truth of this is becoming slowly but surely recognized. The 400th Memorial celebration of Luther's birth, that "solitary monk who shook the world,' occurring on Nov. 10th, is exciting a world-wide interest. As an historical character only, his life is worthy of the most careful study: all Christendom has shared in the untold blessings, ecclesiastical and civil, which have followed his sublime labors for God and man. A book which will present, in when Mr. H. would be subjected to popular, clear and attractive style, an unbiased record-not estimate-of the man as he spoke and acted, is the need of the hour. This the present volume fittingly supplies. Giving the salient features of his life as contained in phies, omitting discussions on purely theological questions, it presents its subject in so attractive a manner that the interest never flags.
