NO. I.

May we not hope that at the coming Convention at Moncton, measures may be adopted and enthusiasm awakened that shall be the means of giving a new impetus to our Home Missionary opera-

While so much is being said and done in the interests of Academic and Collegiate education at Wolfville, and now at St. John, is it not a good time for us to ask, Are we doing all that God expects of us for our Home Missions? Are we doing all we may to assist our weak Davis, 2.50. churches, and give the Gospel to the perishing thousands of our land? God forbid that I should say anything against Education. I believe with Robert Haldane, that education is great blessing when it sits at the feet of Jesus, and when this is the case we cannot have too much of it. But after all, is there not danger of falling into the temptation of giving to this department of our work a larger share of attention than we can consistently with other claims that may be even more urgently pressing themselves upon us.

The culture of the mind is impertant, and we are in duty bound to provide every facility possible, under the circumstances, for the rising generation to secure a liberal education. But while we are willing to admit this, yet we know that the salvation of the soul is not only important, but ESSENTIAL, and unless we allow this fundamental principle of our holy religion to have its due weight upon our minds in shaping and carrying forward our denominational work, we shall, more than likely, be found either hiding, or misappropriating

Our Home Mission is our first and greatest work. He who is our pattern and example in all things, was a Home Missionary in the highest and truest sense of the word. From city to city, from hamlet to hamlet, and from house to house, He went preaching the Gospel and performing His wondrous works. How true it is, "He went about doing good," The Apostles were home missionaries; "they went," it is said, "through the towns, preaching the Gospel and healing everywhere."

The early Christians were home missionaries. We read that "they were scattered abroad, and went everywhere preaching the word."

The fathers of our denomination in these provinces were home missionaries. They too went everywhere preaching the Gospel and establishing churches: and it is due largely to the missionary spirit of the fathers that we are indebted, under God, for our success in the past, and for the very favorable position we occupy among the denominations to day.

expecting to see the same spirit in us? And is it not this spirit more than anything else that will gain health and vigor to our enterprises and make us successful in every laudable undertaking? this from coming to New York as And is it not this that will give point, to our utterances, zeal in our efforts. fervor in our prayer and direction in

Upon the vigor and the enterprise with which our home mission work is pushed forward depends very largely our success in every other undertaking in which we are engaged. Success in this work is at the very foundation, in fact of success in all our work as Christians and as Baptists.

If we succeed here there will be no lack of either men or money for the Foreign field, and our Educational interests will not be allowed to suffer. But on the other hand if we fail here, and it is as startling as it is true, we fail everywhere.

In Memoriam.

MR. JAMES W. STEVENS,

whose death was noted in the Messenger a few weeks ago was a man of more than ordinary powers, of keen judgment concerning, and insight into, the affairs of men. This coupled with a high religious character, made him at once a worthy and respected member of the community in which he lived. He was born at Onslow, June 10th, 1803. Whilst he was yet at an early age his father removed to Forest Glen, on the Stewiacke, in the County of Colchester, being the first settler in this beautiful and fertile district. In 1832, after he had attained to manhood and become persuaded of the Bible truths as held Freeport-Mrs. J. W. Eldridge ... $12 00 5. INFIRM MINISTERS' RELIEF AND AID by our people, he was baptized by the late Rev. Geo. Richardson. With his brother Jacob, (still living), he was the first person ever immersed on a profession of faith in Christ in Brookfield. He became a member of the then newly organized Baptist Church at Stewiacke, in which he was for many years an office bearer. A few years ago he removed to Brookfield, united with the church and engaged in business. As a delegate to the Eastern Association, and the Convention, he has long been favourably known to the denomination. His liberality was well known, and his death was a severe blow to the little church here who will sadly miss both his contributions and his words of counsel. He was one of the first who began the agitation in favor of temperance, and during his long life he continued his efforts in behalf of sobriety engaged in the active duties of life, he was a useful member of society, a faithful exponent of pure, Christian truths and doctrines, and one to whom many fail. looked for advice.
