She had no one to whom she could go that night, and while out doors she was arrested by a policeman in Chelsea as a night walker. When taken to court she acknowledged she was a night walker and was sentenced to serve sixty days at Deer Island prison. After her release from the prison Miss Martin claimed that she did not have any idea what the term "night walker" meant, as she had not been long in the city.

THE PRIZE WINNERS

At Fairs and Exhibitions Used the DIAMOND DYES.

The Fall fairs and exhibitions held this year in Canada were a source of pleasure and satisfaction to hundreds of energetic and artistic ladies. Magnificent displays of Mats, Rugs and Carpets made from rays dyed with the Diamond Dyes, drew the special attention of thousands of visitors.

In ninety-nine cases out of every hundred, the exhibitors who used the Diamond Dyes to colour the materials of which their Mats, Rugs and Carpets were made, took the best prizes. No stronger proof of the superiority of Diamond Dyes could be demanded. Women all over Canada will find it pays to use Diamond Dyes to re-color their faded and dingy looking dresses, skirts, blouses, capes, jackets, ties, ribbons, etc. One package of Diamond Dyes will do as much as three packages of the common dyes, and give colours far more beautiful, more brilliant and more lasting.

The militia had to interfere to secure order and at length the operatives returned to their work. The militia being mostly English and the operatives mostly French there was much feeling on the part of the latter.

The Montreal Courts have decided that a testator cannot make one's religious persuasion a condition of benefiting by his will. By his will the late Hon. J. L. Renaud had created a substitution in favor of his grandchildren, and one of the clauses of the will was to the effect that should any of the heirs contract marriage outside of the Catholic church or be brought up outside of the same church, such branch would thereby become disinherited. C. Z. Renaud, one of the sons, got married before a magistrate in the State of Illinois, and his son, the present plaintiff, took out this action calling upon the testamentary executors of his grandfather to render him an account of his share of the estate. His contention was sustained by the Judge.

The English people will be delighted to hear that Sipido has been arrested. The action of the Belgian governor in applying for the surrender by the French authorities of the miscreant who attempted to shoot the Prince of Wales was probably the outcome of Lord Salisbury's protest to Brusse's against the grave miscarriage of justice embodied in the verdict.

FAMOUS TREES.

The charter oak is in Hartford, Conn., and concealed the charter of the colony for several years from 1687. Washington took command of the army under an elm tree in Cambridge. The treaty elm, under which William Penn signed the famous treaty with the Indians in 1682, was upon the banks of the Delaware. It died in 1829.

The great linden in Wurtemberg was 800 years old. The city of Neustadt was for many years known as the city near the linden. In 1408 a poem was written about it. The famous cedars are on Mount Lebanon. There are sixteen that measured more than thirty feet in circumference in 1696.

The walnut was originally called the gaulnut in England because it came from France (Gaul). Walnuts played an important part at the siege of Amiens, near the end of the sixteenth century, when a party of Spanish soldiers, dressed as French peasants, brought a car-load of nuts to sell, and, as the gate opened for them to enter, the nuts were spilled upon the ground and sentinels stooped to pick them up, when the Spanish soldiers pounced upon them, killed them and guarded the gates while the Spanish army entered.

The fig tree leaves were dedicated as a crown for Solomon.

The black mulberry was dedicated to Minerva because of its slow growth.—School Record.

MODERN WITCHCRAFT IN FRANCE.

That witch influence is not yet on the wane in some parts of France is proved by a horrible case of desecration of a grave reported from Pouzanges, in La Vendee. One Brochard, a small farmer, took a shovel, hammer, and chisel into a cemetery in the place mentioned one night recently and dug up a coffin from a week-old grave. Then he pried his hammer and chisel on the casket, which contained the corpse of a woman, broke it open, and with a large clasp knife cut off some flesh from the body. The noise attracted the attention of the caretaker of the cemetery, who went to the spot, and believing the grave opener to be a madman with whom it would be dangerous to interfere single-handed, went for the gendarmes. These on approaching Brochard had to beat a temporary retreat, as he threatened them with his shovel, but returning to the charge again they overpowered the man and carried him away. Brochard was found to be sane enough. He deceived his ghoul-like doings in the graveyard on the ground that a witch had told him to get as a remedy for an abscess in the head, which the doctor could not cure, some "dead man's quinine." This was to be obtained from the head, heart, and one of the fingers of the corpse. He accordingly started for the cemetery, intending to get part of the body of an old employe, who was buried at Pouzanges. Not being able to find the grave of his former master, he opened that of a lately buried woman. Brochard is kept a prisoner by the police, who so far believe that he is thoroughly responsible for his action.—London Telegraph.

LITERARY NOTES.

The readers of St. Nicholas will be glad to find in the November number, the opening pages of a new serial. It is a tale of the transition from Dutch to English dominance in the city of New York nearly two and a half centuries ago. There are several short stories. Benjamin B. Smith describes with illustrations, the mechanism of the chariot-race in the performance of "Bon Hur." "A Baker's Dozen of Wild Beasts' are rounded up in several pages of verse and pictures. Mrs. Joseph Parrell tells how children behaved four centuries ago. Pictures, poems, and useful hints to readers abound.

The November Century, beginning the magazine's thirty-first year, is the first of two numbers especially noteworthy, not only for the interest of their contents, but for the beauty and abundance of their illustrating papers, in which the reader is transported to the shores of the Gulf of Mexico. With November the Century begins a Year of Romance, in the course of which it will present a number of short stories by famous writers, with longer ones, and two or three serials. Apart from fiction the number is rich in matters of interest, such as the beginning of a group of papers on Daniel Webster the second article on the Far East. "The New York Zoological Park," etc.

Just at this time of the year the readers of magazines are considering what periodicals shall be ordered for 1900, and most magazines are publishing their next year's programme. At the head of every list, patriotic citizens may well place The Canadian Magazine. It is distinctly national in the sense that it circulates in every part of Canada and deals with such topics as interests every citizen. The Canadian Magazine has a considerable circulation in Great Britain and the United States and also in the following countries: India, Japan, Phillipines, Australia, New Zealand, Zanzibar, British North Borneo, Jamaica, Barbadoes, British Guiana, Brazil, C. in Mexico, Hawaii, Russia, Germany and Hungary. A magazine which is received with such favour abroad should be well supported at home. The November number, just to hand, contains some valuable articles, including "A Visit to a Round-up," illustrated and "The Story of Eight General Elections."

GOOD TO HIM.—Dr. A. MacLaren's church, understanding that the reporter wished to visit Egypt a second time to examine certain points of his oriental and archæological interest, not only granted him a vacation, but presented him a purse of $2,000 to cover expenses. At over a seventy-five years of age he is still the foremost preacher of the age and word, his services being always thronged. What would not the work of Christ have lost had his church set the "lead line" at even sixty or seventy? How sad it is that so many men have their life's service cut off just when it is reached its fullest maturity and promise by a wretched impatience of everything that is not young and smart.—Can. Baptist.

Tru-godliness is no more to be taken out of business, out of social life, and out of politics, than the lever is to be taken away from the meal, or the salt is to be barrelled up by itself. Christ puts his followers right into his wicked world, and commands them to let their light so shine that men may see their good works and be led to honor God. The Christian who is afraid to mix with his fellow-men lest his godliness be rubbed off, has really but little godliness to lose.—Dr. Cuyler.

COURTESY THAT CO

A novel suit has been on trial in the courts of Pittsburg, Penn. It seems that one minister had another to act as supply in his place at twelve dollars a Sabbath. The defendant claimed that on occasions he had recognized his minister in the audience, and him to preach as a matter of course. Three services were included in the bill. Should the claim be allowed, what is known as pulpit duty yet become an expensive luxury.
