

Don't Forget.

Don't forget to kiss your mother Though her face is wrinkled now, For her heart is just as loving As when she kissed your baby brow.

Don't forget how she leaned o'er you, When none else cared to come near,
With your breath so fever tainted, Still to her you were most dear.

Don't forget to smooth her tresses That years of care have turned to grey, Don't forget the kiss that healed you When you were hurt in childish play.

Won the Prize for Heroism.

I shall never forget the lesson which I received when quite a young lad at an academy in B——. Among my schoolfellows was Hartley and Jemson.

Hartley was a new scholar, and little was known of him among the boys.
One morning, as we were on our way to school, he was seen driving a cow 'Hello!' he exclaimed, 'what's the price of milk? I say, Jonathan, what do you fodder on? What will you take for all the gold on her horns?

Hartley, waving his hand at us with a pleasant smile, and driving the cow to the field, took down the bars of a rail fence, saw her safely in the en-rest of us. After school, in the afternoon, he let out the cow and drove her off, none of us knew where. And every day, for two or three weeks, he

The boys of — academy were nearly all the sons of wealthy parents, and some of them were dunces enough

With admirable good nature did Hartley bear all these silly attempts to wound and annoy him. I do not re-

'Why not?' asked Hartley.
'O, nothing! Only don't leave much water in the cans after you rinse them

The boys laughed, and Hartley, not in the least mortified, replied, 'Never fear; if I should ever rise to be a milk-

The day after this conversation there was a public exhibition, at which a number of ladies and gentlemen from other cities were present.

'I lay on my face,' he says, 'and stretched out my toe, hoping to draw within reach the trap wrench, which I move either trap, and there lay stretched out and securely staked to the ground.

inquiries, but stayed to render services.

This scholar soon learned the wounded boy was the grandson of a poor widow, whose sole support consisted of selling the milk of a fine cow of which she was the owner.

'But his kindness did not stop here.
Money was wanted to get articles from the apothecary. I have money that my mother sent me to buy a pair of boots with; but I can do without them

'Well, when it was discovered by other boys of the academy that our scholar was in the habit of driving a cow, he was assailed with laughter and ridicule.

'And now, ladies and gentlemen, I appeal to you, was there not true heroism in this boy's conduct? Nay, Master Hartley, do not sink out of sight be-

As Hartley, with blushing cheeks, made his appearance, what a round of applause in which the whole company joined, spoke the general approbation

The old men wiped the gathering moisture from the corners of their eyes and clapped their hands. Those clumsy boots on Hartley's feet seemed prouder

Let me tell a good thing of Jemson before I conclude. He was heartily ashamed of his ill-natured raillery, and after we were dismissed, he went, with tears in his eyes, and tendered his hand

within reach the trap wrench, which I had thrown down a few feet away.

'Intent on securing the wrench, I swung about my anchor, stretching and reaching to the utmost, unable to see just where it lay, but trusting to the sense of touch to find it.

Two Indoor Games.

Thimble hunting is a special favorite among indoor games, even with 'grown-ups,' but this is a new way of playing it. All leave the room except the one with the thimble, who does not hide it at all, but must put it in

For instance, a good place is on a nail which holds up a picture, or the window ledge, stuck in the fringe of the table-cloth, put in the ornamental part of the fender, or, in fact, any-

When the 'hider' has placed the thimble, he calls the rest of the company in, and the search begins.
Now, listen, for this is the most important rule of all. Those who are Perfect silence should prevail, and when the boy or girl sees it he or she must sit down on a chair, and so on, till all have seen it. Then the one who sat down first has to hide the

Of course you must not pop down immediately into a chair the moment you have seen the thimble, as that would betray at once where it was, but walk

Another game is played with squares of colored paper, four being given to each player, who is also furnished with a Japanese fan. A square is marked
