Those who have supposed that tea-growing is impracticable in America will be surprised by the title of an article contributed by Leonard Beck Ellis to the Review of Reviews for March, 'American Tea Gardens, Actual and Possible.' The facts set forth by Mr. Ellis fully justify the title of the article, for it is shown that tea is successfully grown and prepared for the market in the Carolinas, and there appears to be no good reason why the industry should not be conducted in other parts of the South. Science proves that it is feasible.

The Teapot test is the one for such a Tea as Red Rose.
