LITERARY NOTES.

The Methodist Magazine for February contains nearly half a score of illustrated articles. One of the most striking is that on "The Beggars of Paris," by Louis Paulian, who has made a special study of the class, sometimes wearing its garb. "Through Fire and Water in China" is a vivid account of the Boxer rebellion. James L. Hughes, one of the best educational authorities on the continent, has an illustrated article on "The Triumph of the Kindergarten Philosophy." "The Sword of the Lord Still Edged," discusses the evidential value of the Old Testament Scriptures. "The Canon's Christmas" and "Dust That Shines" are fascinating short stories. Toronto: William Briggs. $2.00 a year; $1.00 for six months.

An article on Marconi, a new serial and other notes worthy features, made the February Canadian Magazine attractive. The new serial is entitled "The Four Feathers." The Hon. J. W. Longley writes of Canada's Religious Development. He thinks people are not so devout and religious to day as they were a century ago. Norman Patterson described the famous tidal bore at Moncton. The departments are as interesting as usual.

The National Temperance Almanac and Teetotaler's Year-Book for 1902, Compiled by J. B. Dunn, D. D., and published by the National Temperance Society, New York, contains an Historical Review of the Temperance Reform during the last century, in which are noted important events in the formation and history of temperance organizations, statistical tables of the liquor traffic and other up-to-date matters.
