AGAIN.—Once more the date of the end of the world is announced. Rev. J. W. Baxter, editor of the Christian Herald, is the responsible party this time, and 1929 is the year he names for the winding up of all things earthly. Of course he does not know anything about it, but he thinks he does. If he happens to be alive in 1929 he will explain the mistake and name another year. How much better for men to refrain from trying to be wise above what is written, and to go about their work faithfully, not caring when the end may be.
