FULL OF FAITH AND FAITHFUL.

Stephen was full of faith and of the Holy Ghost, and he was faithful to the work assigned him, and faithful to God and to the people in delivering the message that the Holy Spirit dictated, regardless of the consequences. And they chose Stephen, "a man, etc. God needs in connection with the holiness work in every community, one or more, who have the quantities that it can truly be said of him "a man." True manliness is always at par value. A man in the true sense, full of faith and of the Holy Ghost, Stephen assumed the responsibilities assigned him, and stood his ground until death. Nothing could drive him, no personal interests could draw him away. We must recognize the fact, that there is a strong combination of interest in every place where the considering the number present. genuine experience exists, and these A good meeting was also held at feel it in the keenest way possible. With some he begins to reason, and tell how much more they can accomplish somewhere else, and when once he has their mind turned on that place, then he brings a combination of reasons and circumstances to back up his argument, and they begin to that so much better than battling here comparatively alone. work previously kept up, have now ceased their effort, and who can picture the awful result of deserting a God given post.

A genuine consecration places God's work a thousand leagues before our personal interests and ease, our love to him transcends all earthly ties, as wife, children and home, or social comforts.

Be thou faithful to death. Stephen stood at his post when they gnashed on him with their teeth; he did not look to the city, town or country, but he looked up steadfastly into heaven, and instead of him seeing blue ruin all about him, he beheld the glory of God, and Jesus standing (for Jesus showed special interest in that kind .30 of a man) on the right hand of God, and they could not drive him out. So they cast him out, and killed him to make sure he would not come back, for doubtless he would have returned to his post if he had lived.

A THIEF.

A person finding lost property and retaining it after they have learned to whom it belongs, is an out and out thief. Rev. J. Perry, of Hartland, while going about that village a few days since lost his pocket book containing about $17. His friends kindly made it up to him. This may ease the conscience of the finder a little but that person remains a thief. Another gentleman lost upwards of $150 in the same way, in the same village, probably the thief that found that he quiets his conscience by saying he was able to lose it; he will not be any poorer. But still his conscience brands him a thief.
