The buckboard stood in front of the steps and the crowd was gaily collecting. Old Mr. Beekman watched them wistfully. It was Carl Frost, who, turning to call back a gay word to someone, noticed the lonely figure with the pathetic eyes and dangling trumpet.

"Excuse me just a moment," she said to Juliet Beekman. "I want to speak to your grandfather."

She ran back to the steps and held out her hand for the trumpet.

"We are going to climb Old Bald," she explained. "We expect to reach the top about noon. We have mirrors to signal with and a field glass. Won't you wave to us? I am sure we could see you."

The old man's face brightened. "Surely! Surely!" He nodded eagerly. "I'll watch."

All the morning he was restless and excited. He climbed to his room for his largest handkerchief, and went into the house half a dozen times to compare his watch with the clock. Finally the flashes appeared. A number of people were watching, and answered from the steps. In his corner he waved his handkerchief alone.

He was waiting when the crowd returned. Carol went to him at once.

"I brought you the prettiest stone I could find on the top," she said.

"I thank ye—thank ye kindly!" the old man answered, and then, his eagerness conquering, "Are ye sure ye saw me?"

"Sure," Carol answered. "You were standing right on this corner; the others were on the steps."

The old man's face was almost radiant. Someone had watched for him—for him!

That was the way it began—the old man's happy summer. Presently a few others fell into the habit of stopping a minute or two to tell him of their trip; and when they had a "stripping bee," at Carol's suggestion he was invited. It did not trouble him that he could not hear; it was happiness enough to be doing something with other people. His old, trembling fingers fumbled eagerly over the fragrant fir.

Juliet did not wholly like it. "You mustn't let grandfather bother," she told Carol.

"He doesn't," Carol answered, quietly. "It isn't a bother; it's a pleasure."

A month after she reached home Carol received a package and a note. The package contained an old medal. The note was from Juliet.

"Poor grandfather left us last week," Juliet wrote. "He wasn't ill; he just fell asleep one night and did not wake again. Afterward we found this old school medal marked with your name. You won't care for it, I know, but I send it for his sake. We miss him more than we would have thought possible. I wish I had the chance to talk to him again—he wanted so little, and we were so thoughtless."

Carol touched the little old medal tenderly. It had cost something—that summer—but she was so glad now.—Sel.

Quarterly Meeting.

The Quarterly Meeting of district No 3 convened with the church at Seal Cove, Grand Manan, N B, on Thursday, April 21st, 1910.

The business session was held on Saturday at 2.30 p m.

Ministers present:—Rev's J H Coy, H. H. Cosman and H C Archer.

Delegates:—Seal Cove, Wm Benson, Henry Benson and Grosvenor Cook; North Head, S G Murphy and S G Cosseboon; Calais, Me Mrs H C Archer.

Officers elected:—President, Rev J Coy; Secretary, S G Cosseboon; Treas Grosvenor Cook.

Highway Agent, H C Archer.

The following were appointed a devotional committee:—William Benson, Henry Benson, Grosvenor Cook and Rev J H Coy.

Letters were then read from the churches at Beals, Calais and North Head, which were very encouraging indeed.

Seal Cove was reported by the delegates present.

Bro P Green spoke encouragingly of the interest at Two Island.

Bros Cosman, Coy and Archer then spoke of the work on their respective fields of labor.

Bros H H Cosman and H C Archer were appointed a committee to arrange for the next quarterly meeting to be held in September.

There was preaching on Thursday evening by Bro Cosman. Social service Friday afternoon at 2.30 p m Preaching Friday evening by Bro Archer. Saturday evening by Bro Cosman.

Sunday services:—10 a m, love feast led by Bro Coy; 11 a m, Bro Archer preached; 2 p m, Sabbath school; 3 p m, social service led by Bro Cook; 7 p m, preaching by Bro Cosman.

A meeting was also held on Monday evening at which Brother Archer preached.

The services of the quarterly meeting were well attended and it was remarked by several that this was one of the best quarterly meetings that has been held in this district. The Lord helped the brethren to preach the gospel in all its fulness, and as a result, deep conviction followed, and several seekers were at the altar, some professed to get sanctified and others helped.

The interest in the meetings deepened, and at the last service, although some had yielded, yet others were present who were just at the point of decision and yet resisted the Holy Spirit.

Many would liked to have had the services continued, which no doubt would have been done, but as there were special services being held in the United Baptist church so near, it was considered best not to do so.

But truly the Lord blessed the efforts put forth in the quarterly meetings and the church and pastor were much encouraged in the good work in which they are engaged.

The first district quarterly meeting will convene with the Green Bush church June 16 19.

S G COSSEBOON.
