JESUS' LOVE.

My heart is filled with Jesus' love, I feel it in my soul; His precious blood for me was shed And it has made me whole.

He came to me when full of sin, And weary with my load; He said, "My child, why stand you here So far away from home?"

I looked, and lo! I saw his face So full of love for me, My stubborn heart at once did melt And he has made me free.

And I can say that Jesus, Since he has made me whole, Does satisfy my longing heart And glory fills my soul.

Yes, I can sing and praise him now! Yes, Jesus is my song! He died that he might save us all! Why tarry ye so long?

The Saviour said "I called thee long, Why will ye longer wait?" Oh sinner! hear his gentle voice To-morrow may be to late.

My Father's house has room to spare, His love is full and free; He paid the price that we might live When he died upon the tree.

So come to him without delay, His pardoning love to know; For he will cleanse your guilt away, And wash you white as snow. Moncton, June, 1896.

No one is so weak that he can not render some small service to humanity if he We wonder sometimes what some will. Many Christians spend much valupeople would do, if they could not find able time awaiting for opportunities to do something to talk about their neighbors some great thing. The little things that or their brother or sister in the Church? are ready at hand awaiting to be done, If such would ever get to heaven (of are so insignificant that they are to be course that is out of the question), they passed by without notice. The smallest could not be happy unless they could find service performed in the name of Christ, some fault to pick at. But heaven is has all the essential features of the greatfaultless, and so God has no use for them | er, and counts for as much in the records of eternity.
