and funds had been at their disposal. The grounds have been much improved; the tabernacle, erected during the year, seemed to be all that one could wish for to meet the ends for which it was designed,-"Just what we need," was the oft-heard expression. "Much better than] had any idea of," another would say. And certainly those who had seen and suffered from the failures of the old tent were very willing to endorse all these utttances.

The wisdom of the committee in securing the services of Dr. Carradine was clearly demonstrated by the results of his labor. We cannot see with our limited knowledge how the services could have been improved. The Dr. is an admirable preacher, and a wise worker as well: a marvelously gifted man. He must be heard to be appreciated. To describe him and do him justice would be impossible. His preaching is logical, technical, pathetic, systematic, yet filled with holy irregularities: earnest, yet never allowing his earnestness to overclass of society; but above all other ualifications is the unmistakable

MY FATHER KNOWS.

In one of the public schools of a large city, while the school was in session, a transom window fell out with a crash. By some means the cry of "Fire" was raised, and a terrible panic ensued. The scholars rushed into the street, shrieking in wild dismay. The alarm extended to the teachers, also, one of whom, a young lady, actually jumped from the window. Among hundreds of children with whom the building was crowded was one young girl, among the best in the school, who through all the frightful scene, maintained entire composure. The color, indeed, forsook her cheeks; her lips quivered, the tears stood in her eyes; but she moved not. After order had been restored, and her companions had been brought back to their places, the question was asked how she came to sit so still, without apparent alarm, when everybody else was in such a fright. "My father," said she, " is a fireman, and knows what to do in such a case, and he told me if there was an alarm of fire in the school J must just sit still." What a beautiful illustration of faith! "My father told me so, and my father knows!" This is the gist of the whole matter -trust in our heavenly Father.- London Sunday School Times.

A GIRL THAT COULD SWIM.

A girl named Nyangandi, who lived near the Ogowe River, West Africa, one Saturday came in her canoe with two bunches of plantains to sell to the missionary. When she was going away Mrs. Bachelor, the missionay's wife, said to her;

"Now, you must not forget that 1. Take time to breathe a morning to-morrow will be the Sabbath day. and you have already promised to come every time."
