New Game Refuge Is Established

New Brunswick Now Has Six Lots Closed To Hunters

Protection of Game Animals Necessary to Preserve Wild Life.

The protection of game is an important matter in New Brunswick where hunting has developed into an industry in which many people earn their living. In order to maintain the moose, deer and other game animals certain seasons are selected when these animals may be hunted. At other time it is unlawful to kill them. Beside this, certain sections of the province have been set aside as game refuges.

Already there are six of these refuges in New Brunswick, the latest being established a few days ago. It is the federal artillery range and forestry experimental station area in York and Sunbury Counties, where about seventy-eight square miles have been constituted a game refuge by order-in-council of the New Brunswick Government.

The establishment of a game refuge in the territory, where a formal relief project is now under way, was undertaken by the provincial government on the suggestion of Dominion authorities. This is the first game refuge to be created within a short distance from Fredericton, and within a few years it should result in increasing the number of game and fur-bearing animals through protection from hunters.

Practically 50,000 acres are embraced in the territory which

New Brunswick's Position Better Before Confederation

Some Fallacies Brought Out Into the Light by W. C. Milner—Debt Seen On the Increase.

By W. C. MILNER

The revenue of New Brunswick after Confederation was something over half a million dollars, with this same, all bills were paid, schools, roads, bridges, etc., and there was a surplus. We entered Confederation with a surplus of two millions of dollars on which Ottawa paid us $100,000 interest. We were then increasing in industries, wealth and population. What is our position today?

Most of our industries are either closed up or gone to western cities. The vacant stores in the two leading streets of Saint John are evidence of decay. In all business centres of the province, that depended upon general prosperity, there is the same evidence of decline; dry-rot has set in.

Naturally there is a loss of population. Some agricultural settlements have become almost depopulated, calculating with the natural increase there has been a loss of population the last ten years of five per cent., and the same decrease in agricultural products. This province, not being able to keep its end up with Ottawa, it is about to lose another representative in Parliament.

The financial position of the province is deplorable. Not only has the two millions to our credit at Ottawa disappeared, but an enormous debt has been accumulated, the interest on which eats up about a third of the public revenue.

The table accompanying this shows the list of outstanding bonds of the Province of New Brunswick.

At the present rate of progress down hill, we will soon reach the bottom to meet a commission appointed by our creditors to handle our affairs in place of the existing governmental machinery, the same as Newfoundland, and British Columbia would be it today. If Premier Bennett had not come to its rescue.

Places and positions of honor attract the best men.

"Man is his own star, and that soul that can

Be honest is the real perfect man."

The time was when seats in the legislature were sought, not for pay, but for the honor and dignity they conferred. In a baser age, honor and dignity are exchanged for money. The first leg-
