WHO'S WHO AT WLW

William C. Stoess

Although but 34 years old, William (Bill) C. Stoess, might well be dubbed the "grand old man" of WLW. He has been associated with that station for 13 years, has seen it grow from a modest 500-watter to its present status as the world's most powerful broadcasting station with 500,000 watts of globe-circling strength . . . Having literally grown up along with the broadcasting industry, Stoess knows his radio from A to Z. . . In the early days he served his apprenticeship as musician, announcer, script writer, conductor . . . About seven years ago he was elevated to his present position as WLW's Director of Music. In that capacity he has played an important part not only in the creation and production of that station's most successful broadcasts but also in work of bringing the art of radio broadcasting to its present high stage of development . . . As Music Director of WLW, Stoess heads the largest full-time radio musical staff in the world . . . In addition to his executive activities, Director Stoess still finds time to conduct such ace musical shows as "Crosley Follies," "Music Box Hour," "Musical Style Show." The Flying Dutchmen—famed radio symphonic-jazz orchestra—is the apple of his eye . . . His post-graduate work at the College of Music of Cincinnati, won for him the coveted Springer Medal. In 1925 he married Rosemary Allerbrock, herself an accomplished musician . . . Away from the studios, Bill spends his time golfing, reading detective stories, thinking up strategies to defeat baldness.
