

Harrow District And Its History Is Now Under Survey

Hamlet Dates Back Some 3,000 Years Under Various Names.

London.—The history of Harrow—hamlet, town and school—from its first discovery 3,000 years ago until the present day, is traced for the first time in "Harrow Through the Ages," by Walter W. Druett.

Mr. Druett, while less concerned with the school than the social, ecclesiastical and municipal growth of Harrow town and the surrounding neighborhood, nevertheless includes a great deal of the school's early history, for which he has collated much fresh material.

In the earlier history the author comments on the astonishing progress of Harrow's place name through the centuries.

In the earliest document, dated 767 A.D., the district is referred to as Hergae.

"Then one comes to Hêarge, 825; Hergas, 832; Herges, 1086; Herga, 1094; Hereghes, 1232; Hergh, 1243; Harewes, 1259; Harwe, 1307; Harwe, 1316, and Harogh, 1368. Harrow atte hill is reached in 1479, and Harrowe-on-the Hills, 1535."

The five articles laid down by John Lyon, founder of Harrow School, in 1592, include:

Thus: "You shall submit your child to be ordered in all things according to the discretion of the schoolmaster and usher." Again: "You shall allow your child, at all times, bow-shafts, bowstring and a bracer to exercise shooting."

mill on the property. At the Tangier property, Smelters have sunk to the 1,000-ft. level.

Seal Harbour Gold Mines has carried operations at its Guysboro County property to an advanced stage. Ore has been proved to the 300-ft level, and the company is going ahead to scheduled production.

Nugold Mining Corp. developing the Blockhouse-Dome property two miles west of Mahone Bay, recently encountered promising ore on the 100-ft. level. A second shaft is down 210 feet on the property. In 1935, new buildings were erected.

Lake Thomas Gold Syndicate has been producing since May, 1934, with a 20-ton per day stamp mill with promising results. The property is at Waverly, in Halifax County. Last November, the company estimated ore blocked out at 33,000 tons, with an average grade of half an ounce per ton.

Lacey Gold Mining Co. at Gold River, in Lunenburg County, has met with success so far in developing ore. A 25-ton treatment plant of the ball mill type has been erected largely for test purposes.

Three years progressive operations are behind Montague Gold Mines, at Montague, in Halifax County. The mill is now operating at about 50 tons per day, with development work concentrated on three levels to 385 feet.

Work has begun in the construction of the new reservoir in the Derwent Valley, near Sheffield, England, and shows several steam shovels busy excavating near Ashopton. The new reservoir will eventually submerge Ashopton and a considerable area of the surrounding country. This vast project when completed will augment the water supplies of Sheffield, Derby, Nottingham and Leicester.

Italians Are Tired Of Fascism States London Writer

Correspondent Expelled By Mussolini Sees People Opposed To War.

London, England. — Giovanni Giglio, the Laborite Daily Herald's correspondent in Rome for 17 years, whom Premier Benito Mussolini expelled last week, writes in his newspaper to "shatter the illusion that the Ethiopian war is popular in Italy."

"The Italians, taken as a whole," he writes, "are tired, dissatisfied and hostile toward the Fascist regime that led them into an unwanted war. They see war fast driving their country to ruin. They understand that whether war brings them victory or disaster, their country will at the end be completely pauperized and for at least the next 20 years Italy's export trade will be negligible."

Relating how "nobody dare express this view except in the privacy of his home and in hushed words," Mr. Giglio writes: "To say Mussolini is mad brings the culprit straight before a special Fascist tribunal. That means a ten-year sentence."

"I have known cases of wives who wanted to get rid of their husbands and succeeded in doing so by telling the police their husbands were in the habit of using insulting language about the Duce."

"It is realized everywhere that Mussolini went to war because he was becoming afraid of the economic situation which was rapidly becoming worse in Italy. Even those who approved the war at the outset as a means to an end now are realizing that the price Italy is paying and will continue paying has made the adventure worthless."

Food prices, Mr. Giglio says, are mounting daily. "The Italian housewife in larger towns finds almost every morning some new increase in the cost of food. Oil, sugar, coffee, butter, bacon, cod fish and even fresh fruit and vegetables cost now almost double what they did four months ago."

TO DIRECT AIRCRAFT BUILDING

LIEUT.-COL H. A. DISNEY, shown above at his home at Chorley Wood, Bucks, England, has been appointed Director of Production at the British Air Ministry, and he will be responsible for the carrying out of the great R. A. F. expansion scheme. During the next three years the program will call for the production of more new British service aircraft than were built in the whole of the last seventeen years.

TREE MURDERERS

Standing knee deep in decayed wood chips, a man in armour was recently discovered inside a hollow oak. Beside him rested a sword, which crumbled almost to dust on exposure to daylight; his bones betrayed the same powder-like fragility, and his coat of mail resembled in the observer's eyes "rusty, red tissue paper." Obviously, in his anxiety to hide from his enemies this centuries-old soldier in scuttling into a tree had overlooked the means of getting out. The oak, holding him prisoner, had starved him to death.

There is a similar case of a much treasured duck, which vanished from an English village in 1601 only to reappear three centuries later, when a certain ash in that village was felled. There, etched with wonderful clarity on the timber, was the outline of the duck. Upon its substance the tree had obviously dined well.

Sackcloth Was Regimental Dress Of British Unit

Patches of Brown Canvas Are Now Worn as Emblem.

London.—The South Staffordshire Regiment (38th Foot) has received official sanction to incorporate in its uniform a piece of brown canvas.

It is not a particularly decorative embellishment. Nor is it intended to be, since it is to commemorate one of the most exceptional periods in the Regiment's history when it had to use sackcloth for uniform.

Early in the 18th century the Regiment went to the West Indies and there it remained for nearly 60 years. Poor quarters, indifferent food and scarcity of clothing were the accompaniments of its long sojourn in a strange land.

Tradition asserts that there was an absence of material to make new uniforms and nothing apart from sackcloth or other coarse material with which to repair worn-out clothing.

At that period of the Regiment's history the facings were bright yellow. Since 1881 they have been white. A return to yellow facings is now approved, and brown Holland trimmings are to be worn on the skirt of the full dress tunic, while the mess jacket for officers will be scarlet with brown linen lapels and the mess vest of brown Holland.

Similar patches of brown Holland will be worn on the service dress. There will be one under both the cap and collar badges.
