JACK RABKIN TAKES OVER PREMIUM CASH MARKET

The Premium Cash Market, 137 Charlotte Street, which was opened two years ago and operated by J. Beaman, has been taken over by Jack Rabkin. Mr. Rabkin, who is 24 years of age, has for several years been associated with his father, who conducts Rabkin's Grocery on Mill Street. This is his first venture into business for himself. The shop at 137 Charlotte Street is now being remodelled and is to be entirely redecorated. Up-to-date fixtures and modern refrigeration will be installed and with three clerks Mr. Rabkin feels he will be able to give the public an efficient service.

Warning Is Issued To Flooded Areas To Avoid Disease

Department of Health Sends Message To People of New Brunswick.

The flood conditions to which this Province has been subjected have exposed our people to health hazards quite out of the ordinary.

The Department of Health has through its officers kept in close touch with the situation in its various developments. Public water supplies in the flood areas have been the principal concern of both the health department officials and the civic authorities, and the effective co-operation which ensued has resulted in the maintenance of safe water supplies in the affected areas.

The radio and the press have been utilized to carry warnings and information to the public and the Department of Health is very grateful for this assistance so freely given.

Following the actual emergency, the department feels that certain matters should again be brought to the attention of the people.

The most important of these, of course, is the possible risk of pollution of drinking water supplies. Such supplies which under ordinary circumstances may be considered quite safe may, as a result of floods, be polluted with waste matter, especially of human origin which will make the water unfit for use. There is no simple way of determining when a water is safe or otherwise, or even if it should be safe at some particular time, that it will remain so under rapidly changing conditions.

If, therefore, there seems to be any likelihood that a well has been flooded with polluted water, the water from that well should not be used unless it has been boiled for ten minutes, or unless it has been chlorinated. A simple method of chlorination is as follows:

Thoroughly mix one teaspoonful of chloride of lime with one quart of water and keep this in a tightly stoppered bottle as a stock solution. To each two gallons of water to be sterilized, add one teaspoonful of this stock solution. Stir and allow to stand for 20 minutes, after which the water is fit to use.

Either boiling or chlorination will make polluted water safe for human consumption.

water from some other source, only those which are known to be safe should be used. So-called springs are not always safe and even they may have been subject to pollution. If there is any doubt, it is safer to boil or chlorinate the water. Where wells have been flooded and thus subject to pollution, after the flood subsides such wells should be thoroughly pumped out several times and after being allowed to fill up naturally a strong mixture of chloride of lime should be added and then after a time the well should again be pumped out and allowed to fill before the water is used.

Where houses and cellars have been flooded, these should be thoroughly cleaned and aired as soon as the water has been gotten rid of. Aside from the discomfort arising from the flooding of inhabited premises the principal risk is from the selling of articles, particularly foodstuffs, which may have been contaminated by the flood waters. All articles of food which ordinarily are eaten raw should be destroyed; those which have to be thoroughly cooked, such as vegetables, if they have not been exposed to heavy pollution and are otherwise undamaged, may be used. Canned goods and those in air tight glass containers should have the outside thoroughly washed with clean water, but if there is any question of polluted water having gained entrance to such foodstuffs, they should be destroyed.

Soap and water, with sunlight and fresh air will soon remove any danger from soiled articles of household use.

While it is not anticipated that there will be any serious disease outbreaks following our recent flood experiences it might be well for those who have been exposed to keep in mind the possibility of illness following the use of unsafe water. If within the next week or two, cases of intestinal upset should occur or an illness which is indefinite in symptoms, medical attention should be obtained, for typhoid is often very indefinite in its early stage and it is most important, should such cases occur, that they be discovered at the earliest possible time.

The Department of Health and the various health officers will be glad to answer any enquiries and to offer what assistance possible.

The Following is An Extract From One of the City Papers:

Saint John Streets Cleared Off Department of Public Works Conducts Clean-Up Almost a Month Ahead of Usual Spring Effort.

The early spring clean-up of city streets, even to the neighborhood thoroughfares, in which the whole equipment of the Department of Public Works was pressed into service, has been one of the most refreshingly agreeable accomplishments of the past ten days. It was a service that got a favorable reaction from every citizen, old and young.

Commissioner Wilson, who a short time ago stated in the press that the city had had a fortunate winter as far as snow removal was concerned compared to past seasons, certainly lost no time in setting his men and plant to work removing the last vestiges of the irksome season. For years past it had been well into April before the Saint John streets took on any semblance of spring. This year its a record for earliness, they say.

Commissioner Wilson anticipated every branch of spring work. He sent out his ice-removing squads as soon as the mild spell began. Following pick-axing came the dump trucks, then sweepers drawn by tractors; next the flusher and then the pick-up or vacuum-like sweeper. A regular mid-summer job in the middle of March!

The Department of Public Works is a branch of civic service that quite naturally presents itself for public appreciation or criticism more than any other. Everybody takes pride in a clean and an attractive city; nice-looking gardens, well-kept parks. All this demands co-ordinated thought and work and whatever money a city can afford. In administering Saint John's public works Commissioner Wilson has seemingly striven to carry out the desire of the average public-spirited citizen within the bounds of funds available for that purpose.
