The Confederation Promises Are Still To Be Implemented

ments, pays more for what she has to buy and receives less for what she has to sell than any country in the world. Whether it is flour or similar necessity, or farm machinery or motor vehicles or practically everything, any country in the world can buy such commodities produced in Central Canada and the North-West and take delivery of them at the seaboard of New Brunswick at much lower prices than the people of New Brunswick are obliged to pay for the same commodities.

May I particularly draw your attention to the National economic unsoundness of such condition as the manufacture of tropical raw materials in Ontario for export, the handicap imposed upon factories at our seaboard, such as sardine factories, by being obliged to export their products and import some of the commodities they buy through Montreal; and the many other economically unsound conditions of like nature.

Such conditions would indicate national economic insanity if they are not explainable as results of commercial and political immorality of Montreal and Ontario coupled with the weakness of the hybrid political machine at Ottawa and its failure to fairly perform the duties with which it is charged.

The Confederation Agreements placed great powers and responsibilities in the political leaders of Quebec and Ontario who, up to that time, had been unable to successfully govern their own country and they certainly made a deplorable mess of the government of the Confederation from which the people are now suffering.

The problems resulting from the so-called world depression are insignificant compared with the economic tragedies resulting from mis-government.

This Province has greater providential advantages than any country in the world of like area. There are no better people in any country in the world. Its geographical location is one of the best in the world for trading with other countries and with such advantages New Brunswick must advance economically and socially if the unjust handicaps under which our people are laboring are removed.

It has been suggested that New Brunswick should not demand the implementation of the Confederation Agreements unless Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island approve.

May I say, Mr. Speaker, that I do not agree with that opinion which evidently comes from interests that do not want the Agreements carried out. Nor do I think that New Brunswick should try to influence those two Provinces.

As previously stated, the four original Provinces arranged certain Agreements and established at Ottawa what is in effect an agency to implement them, and as the British North America Act 1867, Sec. 145, declares, "It shall be the duty of the Government and Parliament of Canada" to carry out such Agreement.

They have no option in this respect, consequently this matter lies between New Brunswick and the Ottawa agency.

If New Brunswick should secure the approval of Nova Scotia then it follows that she should also secure the approval of Quebec and Ontario.

The position of Prince Edward Island is quite different. That country entered the previously-established Confederation under an Agreement arranged between Prince Edward Island and Canada, and regardless of that fact that Prince Edward Island's population is less than one hundredth part of the population of Canada, the latter must carry out that two-party Agreement which, incidentally, is pursuant to the agreement arranged between the original Provinces and any violation of the original Agreement is a violation of Prince Edward Island's Agreement.

It is significant that in the first Federal Cabinet (in addition to the Secretary of State for Canada) there was set up a Department headed by a Secretary of State for the Provinces primarily for the protection of Nova Scotia and New Brunswick with Hon. Mr. Archibald of Halifax as its first Minister.

As a result of the protests from Nova Scotia against the Scheme of Union arranged at London, two Imperial Governments of 1868 and 1869, in effect, instructed the Federal Government to "relax or modify" any arrangements that may or that might prejudice the interests of the Maritime Provinces, especially respecting "taxation, the regulation of trade and fisheries"—and the Federal Government agreed to do so.

The record of how those Imperial instructions were in part evaded and Nova Scotia like New Brunswick became a victim of evasion of Confederation obligations, is enlightening.

Hon. Joseph Howe is classed by historians as the greatest victim of Sir John Macdonald's many political victims.

Hon. Mr. Howe was persuaded to accept the Federal portfolio of President of the Council with the assurance that as a Minister he would be in a position to frame the Legislation necessary to protect Nova Scotia and Macdonald would have it passed.

In 1870, Hon. Mr. Archibald was made Governor of the North West Territories and Howe became Secretary of State for the Provinces.

As soon as Howe was sworn in and under oath not to divulge what took place in the Cabinet, reports were circulated to the effect that Howe had turned traitor to Nova Scotia and some of his closest friends turned their backs to him in the streets of Halifax.

This cleavage in the Nova Scotia party made it comparatively easy for Macdonald to further break up that party with the result that Howe was in the Cabinet without much backing by Nova Scotia leaders and became practically helpless and, ever since, Nova Scotia has been divided against herself in so far as her federal rights are concerned.

Nova Scotia received some increase in so-called subsidy, generally known as "better terms" as an easement in taxation, but nothing was done to insure the regulation of trade and to protect the fisheries which Rose intended to give to the United States.

The same Rose who outlined the plan of betrayal of the Confederation acted for the Federal Government in adjusting the financial arrangement with Nova Scotia.

In 1873, Howe was made Governor of Nova Scotia but he was broken in health and spirit and died soon afterward.

Ontario and Quebec had control of the Federal governmental machine and did not require a department to protect their rights and interests and no doubt did not want a department which might interfere with the Rose plan of betrayal.

Following Howe's removal from Ottawa, the Department of Secretary of State for the Provinces disappeared and subsequently the Department of the Interior was established to protect the rights and interests of the North West Territories.

Turn where you may and you will find unjust handicaps imposed upon the producers, importers and shippers of this Province.

Such injustice must not be permitted to continue, in fact, cannot continue if this Province is to survive.

To remove an effect we must remove the cause—to cure a disease, the cause must be removed. Palliatives may give relief but they cannot effect a cure; applying palliatives and patching up our industries by subsidization will simply be prolonging the agony with final destruction inevitable.

This House must remove the handicaps and provide our people with the governmental machinery necessary to enable them to help themselves.

This little Province is the Mother of the B.N.A. Confederation. Without her consent, the governmental institution named Canada could not have been created.

I believe this House, can, and I hope will, have the Agreements of Confederation carried out in letter and spirit, thus conducting the welfare of the Provinces and promoting the interests of the British Empire as the governmental institution named Canada was established to do.
