

The Best-Dressed Burglar Steals 80 Silk Shirts

Here's the Record of Several Peculiar Thefts of Late Years.

In the Balkans recently a man with a good name for use in a sobriety test — Chajagija — was found to have acquired by burglary 80 silk shirts, 100 pairs of silk socks and 15 new suits. He is probably the world's best-dressed burglar.

Not long ago, the German village of Greiffenberg overslept. The church clock had ceased to chime. A burglar had stolen the pendulum of the clock by which the whole life of the village was regulated.

A literary-minded burglar of Bengal, probably aided by some studious colleagues in the profession, stole the contents of the public library of Chota Kalia, books, shelves, manuscripts, cupboards and all.

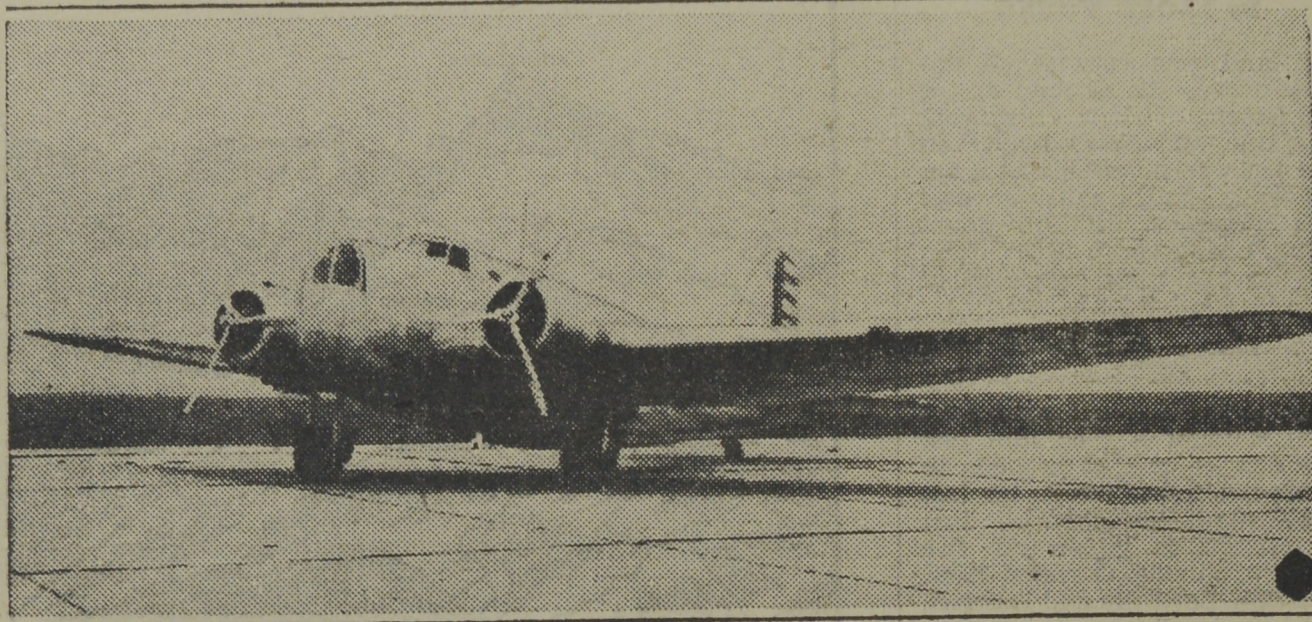

In Wimbledon Park, London, a few months back, a burglar broke into an aviary and took away 40 birds. Nature-loving burglars, however, are a tougher breed in America's Wild West. Two burglars broke into Salt Lake City Zoo and stole a couple of fierce lions from their cages.

A lonely burglar at Bourges, France, took an ancient wooden angel from the church. An American burglar took, brick by brick and beam by beam, an entire house at Lakeport, which had been unoccupied for some time. He was not altogether bad—he left the cellar.

But Macedonia can boast—if it is something to boast about!—the burglar with the strangest haul of all. The little railway station of Fotovitz village was stolen the night before the official opening ceremony. Some bold bad burglar needed a fowl-shed.

A READER DISCLOSES HIS VERY SPECIAL PEEVES

SO THERE!

I may not be a poet,
I guess I'm pretty bad,
Oh, of course, I know it,
But does that make me sad?

Not on your life it doesn't;
You can never put me down.
Ever see me when I wasn't
Laughing like a clown?

Throw on your words of acid
And bite into my frame.
'Ere long you'll be more placid,
For soon they'll shout my name.
—Rae Smythe.

PEEVED

"I'VE BEEN reading your column," writes Marion Miles of Pennsylvania, "and I notice that once in a while you let loose with both barrels on some silly custom or habit of people which amuses you, or some contributor.

"I think it's a good idea, and I've been wondering why you don't turn the column open for pet peeves and gripes (*) so some of us can get such things off our chests. What do you say?"

"Anyway, unless I'm out of order, I want to give mine right now. I call this my 'hate list,' and you can guess why.

"I hate people who say:

"I knew it would rain if I left MY umbrella at home!"

"My! my! it sure is a small world."

"Just wait until you're married YOU'LL find out!"

"It isn't the money—it's the PRINCIPLE of the thing I object to."

"This is a secret, but I KNOW you won't tell."

"I just washed my hair and I JUST can't do a thing with it."

"It seems like everyone tells ME his troubles."

"Don't worry — that won't help matters any."

SPECIAL HATE

"And I have a special brand of hat for people who:

"Always are talking about their home town.

"Applaud before the act or show is over.

"Zup their soup just that way.

"Must do something or go somewhere on Saturday night."

"Laugh before it's time just to appear interested when you are telling a joke."

"I HOPE," adds the writer, "that I don't appear cynical. I'm not, really. I'm just griped."

NO, WE don't think you're so cynical. You're more of a Sulphite, according to the classification of Gelett Burgess. And we agree that most of your peeves are something to be peeved about.
