Aeroplane Is Used For Saving Lives In Remote Areas

miles in a few hours, from the crudities of the mining camp to the ease and amenities of the modern hospital, yet we note on December 23 the pilot notes "This makes fourth passenger taken to Fort Smith hospital by me since November 19." This pilot had been left in the north during freeze-up for just such emergencies.

These flights are all in the day's work. They are so frequent and nowadays are carried out with such an absence of fuss, that they do not attract the attention that more spectacular, but less important, happenings receive. This record, with the alleviation of suffering to which it is witness, is sufficient in itself to warrant the establishment of permanent air services to our northern posts.

SUSPICIOUS

Betty—"Auntie, was your name Pullman before you were married?"

Auntie—"No, dear. Why do you ask?"

Betty—"I just wondered. I see that name on a lot of your towels."
