TOOTH WORMS.

The Chinese Dentist Looks for Them when the Teeth Ache.

It would seem that in dentistry as well as in ways that are dark "the heathen Chinee is peculiar," and in the Journal of the British Dental Association for January, Mr. C. Robins has communicated some curious essays on the subject written in English by Chinese students at the Anglo-Chinese Colege, Foochow. They describe in quaint language the performances of the dentists, who are usually itinerants of the sequah order. They appear to have three methods of treatment:-(1) Extraction, the pa-tient's attention being distracted and his lamentations overpowered by the beating of a loud gong. (2) The application of arsenic to kill an exposed pulp and 3, the extraction of "tooth worms." This latter operation, usually performed by women, is very fre quently resorted to, and undoubtedly worms are produced from the tooth, as these amateur dentists adopt the same principle as the lithotomist in the story who used always to provide against finding his diagnosis had been mistaken by taking a pebble of suitable size in his waistcoat pocket-and themselves introduce these worms, which are usually concealed under their long finger nails. A Chinese student describes the operation to us (we give his own

"Now let me advert to the practice of aresting the tooth worms. One of my relatives was once attacked by a severe cold, and after the cold was broken up by restoring activity to his skin he had neuralgia, which gave him such an intense suffering that he could ly isn't neither eat nor repose, but mouned with a voice so audible and so plaintive that it sent a thrill to the heart of every one in the house. On the second day his suffering increased to a remarkable degree; indeed, it is impossible even at this distant period to reflect without ing, and who is stagnating in his horror on the miseries of his toothache state. Finally he submitted to the operation of a woman dentist, whose agency was to arrest tooth worms. Her proves the rule. Supposing he is, general operation is as follows :- A chopstick and a silver pin are the only instruments she requires in her normal laws of success demands recessory act. She is willing to exhibit them to any one who conceives an inclination of discerning her trickery. She brings yourself. How many successful the chopstick in contact with the dis- men in your town or city do busieased tooth and cautiously pokes it through with a pin in search of the idious worms; after a while scrapes out you be with the successful majority, a lump of yellow minute worms on the or fn the risky minority? chopstick and immerses it in a cup of water. Each lump consists of from ten to fifteen worms, and sometimes two or le ee hundred worms are scraped if the that the fee should be defrayed accord ing to the number of worms scraped. The general fee is 400 cash (1s 2d), and only the poor may take advantage of being in penury to pay 200 cash.-London Public Opinion.

The Queen's Pets.

The Queen has a most wonderful me-endency is noter in the short stories of aory, and never forgets any of her pets; and although there are one or two, like Spot, the fox-terrier, and Marco, the duce for inspection, any one of their charges. At the Windsor kennels, sitile from the Castle here are upwards of sixty dogs of varius breeds, ages and sizes. Each one has its own residence—a little chamber from fourteen to fifteen feet square, with a neatly-tiled yard in front of about the same dimensions. A comfortable bed of clean straw, renewed every day; a tap of water in the front yard, always dripping; two good meals per diem; an attendant to take them for envied by their plebian brethern! Opin the animals perform their ablutions. After the bath is over, the pets adjourn to a drying tent in the corner of the paddock. In another corner is a rustic summerhouse railed off, and known as the Apron Piece," where their Royal mistress used in former days to sit and watch the animals disport themselves The dogs are taken out for their constitutional in two batches, and it is a curious sight to watch them, on their rerow of almshouses. One wonders do they gossip in their doggy way about the Castle folk, and talk scandal of the Pogs-of-Honor-in-waiting to her Ma-jesty—the more fortunate Spot and Marco, her Majesty's personal dog atby the late Mr. Burton-Barber, and exhibited at the Royal Academy a year or two back, standing upon her Majesty's breakfast table.— From "Cassell's Family Magazine."

Well-Known Regiments.

The origin of the famous Forty-second or Black Watch is familiar to many. After the rebellion of 1715 the Government, with the view of bringing the Highlanders more into touch with the rest of the people, caused six companies of them to be raised. The command of each company was given to the chief of a clan. Their duties at first were not strictly military, but more those of an armed police, disarming the Highlanders, and preventing depredations on the lowlands. They executed these duties so much to the satisfaction of the Government that in 1739 the companies were formed into one regiment and enrolled in the line.

The name "Black Watch," by which this distinguished regiment has ever since been known, arose from the dark color of their uniform tartan. How the regiment would have behaved during the rebellion of 1745 it is difficult to conjecture, but, fortunately, it was abroad at the time.

Most of the other Highland regiments were raised in 1793 and the following year. Two well-known Irish regiments platform for the purpose of disposing of the same, except by permission of the Station Master or Conductor under the were also raised at this time--the Eighty-seventh (Royal Irish Fusiliers) and the Eighty-eighth (Connaught Rangers). The Rangers, from their plundering propensities in the Peninsula, were styled by Gen. Picton "the hambers' Journal.

> Brownsmith-"So your daughter narried? What is her husband's buess?" Montmorency—"Well, he's count, I believe, or something of the sort; but he doesn't wo.k at it now."

"What time does the last train leave?" asked the traveler. And the gatekeeper at the Boston depot gave him a haughty look and replied: "When the road quits business."-Washington

"Isn't it sad," asked the young girl, romantically, "to think of the roses of yester year?" "It is." said the young man, emphatically. "I have an unpaid florist's bill of $24."—Chicago Record.

PUBLICITY.

THE PRE-EMINENT VALUE OF GOOD ADVERTISING.

The Newspaper the Only Natural Medium of Bus= iness=Bringing?

Advertising is business. If it wasn't business, it wouldn't be a part of business The man who cannot utilize advertising in his business has no business to be in business, and general-

When six hundred thousand successful business men have advertised, do advertise, and intend to advertise, we will not talk to the man who dosen't believe in advertisown folly, attempting to believe that he is the exception which what man of sense dares follow the laws of success demands necessary ness without advertising? Will Does advertising pay?

Read the answer in the success or the six hundred thousand business atient makes an exact bargain at first men who know that advertising

There is annually expended in America one hundred and fifty million dollars in advertising of all classes, the bulk of this money going into regular periodicals, and daily and weekly newspapers. The proven value of advertising in magazines and other national publications, has no place in this city red Spitz dog, who accompany her Mared Spitz dog, who accompany her Majesty on all her travels, the larger number, who reside at the kennels and on city in which they do business, and the various farms at Windsor, are never overlooked. The keepers of the animals are liable at any moment to be asked after, or to be called upon to pro- proportion coming from not exceed-

Business has suffered from busin ness depression, but no business de pression ever exceeded heyond its epidemic limit, and every depresion has been followed by better times, all the more brisk from their contrast with preceeding months.

The most successful business men prove, by liberal expenditure, walks—how are the Royal dogs to be that there never have been times so dull that extra advertising did not posite the kennels, and separated from them by a tiled walk—"The Queen's Walk," if you please—is a large paddock, in the centre of which is a bath whereand allows the neighbor in business to cut into his old customers, and keep new ones away from him

One has only to judge folks by himself to be convinced that few people buy anything, beyond perishable necessities, without due consideration. A woman seldom buys a turn, march solemnly off, each to its hat, a cloak, or any other article own particular kennel, for all the world for her own use, or for the chilhat, a cloak, or any other article in the manner of the occupants of a dren, except when the matter has been thoroughly reflected upon, and the market investigated.

While men are quicker buyers, most of them think before they buy, tendants? It was the latter, by the way, who figured in the picture painted as buying is concerned, are under and as the majority of men, so far the direct domination of wife, mother, sister, or some other woman we cannot be far out of the way in saying hat most goods are purchased with two or three weeks consideration. If the times have been hard, or are hard, they will buy almost as much, but they will buy necessities and fewer fancy luxuries, when it times are particularly good, they will buy foolish luxuries instead of so many necessities. The times regulate the class of their buying.

Ninety per cent. of the people don't know what to puy.

The majority of people are like sheep. They can be led by real or presumed argument. Many a woman who intends to give a poor relative an oil stove can be made to buy a first class cooking range. Many a father thinking of presentng his son with a bicycle or sled, can be made, with proper advertisements, to purchase a good bicycle or sled, which is cheaper in the end, and more satisfactory all around.

If the times be particularly cul n town, it is partly your fault. You can make them lively If the ad vertisers in the city are slow, un iberal, the best opportunity is of fered the enterprising merchan to take business away from them Where all the merchants are pro gressive, then advertising is all the more progressive, then libera advertising is all the more necessary.

The advertisement should not present more than one point at a time inless the articles be devided by advertising rules or other distinct divisions, which make the advertisement not a conglomeration of advertisements, but a direc tory of distinct attractions, seperatey presented.

It is remarkable now attractive can apparently unattractive article
