Capt. McKinnon, of the riding gallery, arrived in the city Saturday after spending a few days at his home on P. E. Island. STUNNED BY LIGHTNING.

The air has been full of rumors since Thursday morning, of four or five men having been injured by lightning at the South West Boom, one of them very badly, but the telephone has been working so badly that it has been difficult to get particulars. We learn that four men, who were working together on the logs, were knocked into the water. Three of them were only dazed, and soon recovered, bu the fourth was unconscious and had not recovered at last advices. He was using an auger when he was struck. The top urday, a pair of eyeglasses. Can of his hat was ripped off and his shirt was be had at the LEADER office on torn. He is reported to have scrambled ashore, in his unconscious state, thus saving himself from drowning, the others being too much dazed by the shock they had received pay to any attention to him. SERIOUS AFFAIR NEAR BATHURST. A knotty snarl took place in Milltown, near Bathurst, ou Friday last, between a man and woman, which will probably result in the death of a child about four years old. The contestants having spit fire for three quarters of an hour or more, became furious, when the woman, who should naturally have the best of it, sent a stone of good size with very steady aim at the man's head, but he being more of a dodger escaped from injury, and a short two foot deal measured the distance back with terrible rapidity, finding a victim in the person as described above, who was standing near by. An ugly wound was inflicted about the head, which will undoubtedly prove fatal. The guilty party is in jail, pending the result.-Enterprise.

THE PRINCESS OF WALES.

A characteristic anecdote was lately told of the Princess of Wales. The princess, as is well-kdown, while she maintains the even, gentle tenor of her way, never dictating or interfering with others, always tacitly casts her powerful influence on the side of the domestic, quiet woman, show ing no sympathy in dress or actions with her "advanced" sister. One evening not were discussing before the princess the fact that some of the fashionable English women now openly smoke cigarettes after dinner. Arguments for and against the habit were advanced, but the princes. remained silent. At last one of the ladies addressing her by the title which English women of rank only use to the queen and princess, said, "What do you taink of its If there be any pleasure or comfort in tobacco, is it fair that the men should monopolize it? Do you believe it to be as corrupting to the body and mind as Lady Blank says it is!'

The princess smiled. 'I cannot decide on the medical or moral bearings of the question,'she said, gently, 'but I have noticed that men who use tobacco to excess always speak of themselves as "slaves to the habit," and declare that it is imposs ible to break from it. I do not see why women who are trying to emancipate themselves from customs which they declare are tyrannies, should voluntarily puon a yoke which men find intolerable.' This was a new and shrewd view of the case, to which the advocates of cigarettes could find no answer.
