NOTES OF THE DRIVE.

Some Exciting and Laughable Adventures Which Occurred to Our Log-cuffers on the Miramichi.

"Hat," the king of Macnaquac, had a very exciting and unpleasant adventure, while employed on Welsh's lumber drive, on the east branch of the Miramichi. It appears that he was taking a "fiver on the Governor's Rock, so-called, when he heard a noise on the shore behind him, and thinking it was the boss "Jim-Jam," he made a spring for the opposite bank, but instead of landing on his feet, his proboscis, which is the most prominent feature of his anatomy, got caught in the crotch of a birch tree, and held him suspended twixt earth and sky. Upon not putting in an appearance at "grub" time, his companions became alarmed at his absence and secured all the shad and salmon nets in the vicinity, and dragged the river, but could find no trace of "Hat." They were returning to the camp, when one of the men discovered the object of their search in his unpleasant position, and after erecting a derrick and securing the tackle, one of the men took a pole and giving the signal to hoist, pried the imprisoned "smeller" free of the crotch, and soon had him safe in their midst,

Newt, Jim and Dick were the cooks, and right satisfactorily they filled their positions, considering the variety of tastes they had to cater to. Good "grub" and plenty of it was their motto, and they lived up to it. It is hard to find another three to down them, in doing a thing up brown.

"Jack Mac" while on the drive came very near wetting his feet, but as the water was pretty cold and he has a distaste for it in any form, he decided to wait until he reached Fredericton, and "wet his whistle" with something more to his liking than water.

We arrived at the depot in the city of Boiestown, where Welsh paid off his men, and the driving operations were taken charge of by Lynch's crew who will pilot the logs to the boom.

I merely wrote these rambling lines
To show that I'm alive
And tell you of the pranks and shines
One sees upon the drive.

But now I think I've told enough
My plans are nicely made
And beg you not to think me tough
Your comrade,

JACK MCQUADE.
