

NOW WOULDN'T THIS JAR YOU ?

THE SECOND LOYAL TOAST.

The King Says it Should be Drunk Standing.

Being in some doubt as to whether at dinners and public festivities the second of the loyal toasts should be drunk standing or sitting, the Lord Mayor of London, who has been applied to for guidance, addressed to Gen. Sir Dighton Probyn an enquiry upon the subject, and has received the following reply :

Privy Purse Office, Buckingham Palace, 3 Feb., 1902.

My Dear Lord Mayor,—Your Lordship's letter of the 27th ult. I have submitted to the King, and His Majesty commands me to thank you for it, and to say that in his opinion there can be no doubt as to what should be done at public gatherings when the toast is proposed of Her Majesty Queen Alexandra, their Royal Highnesses the Prince and Princess of Wales, and the other members of the royal family.

The toast should His Majesty says, be received standing, and the company should not resume their seats until the first few bars of the National Hymn, to be immediately followed by a few bars of "God Bless the Prince of Wales" have been played.

Yours very truly,
D. M. PROBYN.

The Wheelman's Friend.

No bicyclist should be without a bottle of Hagyard's Yellow Oil. It takes out all the stiffness and soreness of the joints and muscles; relieves pain and takes down swelling from the bites of insects. 25 cents.
