THE BRIDAL AND THE BURIAL

Marriages

BRUCE McDERMOTT AND MISS VANDINE.

Our old friend and former neighbor, Bruce McDermott, who now resides in St. Andrews, recently shook off the last remnant of bachelorhood and put his neck into the other side of the yoke with Miss Vandine of this city. They will make a spanking team, and we wish them a smooth road and not too heavy a load up the hill of life.

J. DUFF KING—MISS KELLY.

Our popular policeman and old friend, J. Duff King, has taken unto himself a helpmate to keep the tea warm on the stove when he comes in from a long night's vigil. He will have something pleasanter to think of, settled down in a cosy and comfortable home, than the eternal drunk and disorderly wretch that must be run in, and in the years to come will perhaps temper justice with mercy toward this unfortunate class, with a good stock of his own of prospective young bloods who may have to keep their eyes peeled for future policemen when out some fine night on a "lark." But all this is in the dim and distant future, and coming back to the present we wish our friend Duff and his estimable lady all possible happiness in life.

Deaths

MR. JAMES CRANGLE

The death of Mr. James Crangle leaves a gap in the ranks of the older residents. He had many friends, made during his many years' residence in this city, and as a friend of his and of the family we shall long remember him, and therefore extend to the bereaved relatives our sincere and heartfelt sympathy.

MRS. WILLIAM LEMONT.

In the death of Mrs. William Lemont the family has lost an affectionate wife and mother, the city one of its most estimable and useful women, and the Methodist Church an indefatigable and self-sacrificing worker. Had the good lady been of a selfish disposition she need not have worked and she could have spent the large amount of money at her disposal in giving parties and the thousand and one useless, extravagant and often wicked ways in which many rich women spend their money; but no—both her time and money was spent in doing good and she used up a not too robust constitution in the service of God, and her fellow mortals. She was no rabid, bigoted enthusiast, but a quiet, dignified and sympathetic worker, and you did not have to belong to her church to share her friendship or assistance if needed.

God, who gives unto every one according to their works, will render unto her an exceeding great reward.

Mr. Bear being at a public dinner, two gentlemen of the name of Bird being in the company, after the cloth was removed, Mr. Bear, who was a good singer, was called on to oblige the company with a song; he immediately arose and said: "Gentlemen, your conduct on this occasion is so highly improper, that I cannot help noticing it." "For why?" said the gentlemen. "Because," he replied, "you call upon a Bear to sing when you have two Birds in the company."
