

The Latest Dolly Gray
CONTAINING A MORAL

I have come to say good-bye,
Dolly Gray;
From the city I must fly,
Dolly Gray;
For I owe a debt or two,
And my creditors will sue
If not paid when they fall due,
Dolly Gray.

Good bye, Dolly, I must leave you,
Though I'd rather you would come;
While I know that this will grieve you,
I am strictly on the bum—
See, the constables are coming,
And I dare no longer stay—
So you see I have to hustle;
Good-bye, Dolly Gray.

Soon I'll be across the line,
Dolly Gray;
Eating chicken—drinking wine,
Dolly Gray;
While the flowing bowl I quaff,
All my creditors I'll chaff,
At their disappointment laugh,
Dolly Gray.

Good-bye, Dolly, till I greet you
In the land of Uncle Sam;
Just to know once more I'll meet you
Makes me happy as a clam.
No new debts to take my money,
And the old ones I won't pay—
Living high on milk and honey—
With my Dolly Gray,

Now I hope all those who read,
Will be wise;
'Tis a warning they should heed—
In disguise;
Do not crowd a man too tight,
And he'll try and do what's right—
For his bread he has to fight—
Money flies.

Good bye, friends, I had to leave you,
Though I tried my best to stay;
If some folks had stopped their crowd-
ing

I would be with you to-day;
But they all kept up their dunning
For the debts I fain would pay;
Till at last they had me running;
Now I'm here to stay.

Man must eat or else he'd die,
Dolly Gray;
It's a fact they can't deny,
Dolly Gray;
But some people never think
That a man must eat and drink—
Just hand over all his chink,
Debts to pay.

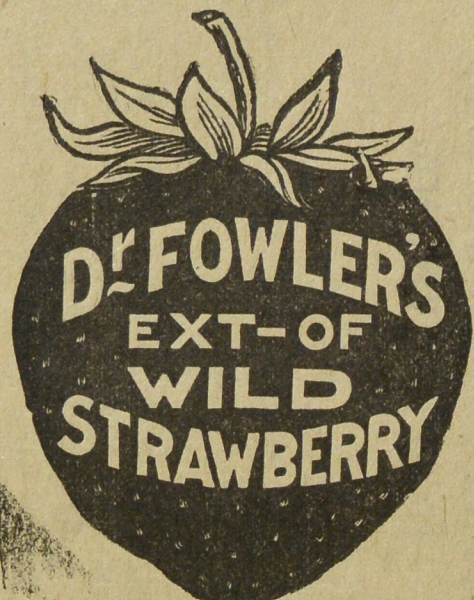

Now, I know what I'm about,
On this tack;
You had better "cut it out,"
It's a fact;

I will give you a straight tip—
Crowding makes a fellow "skip"
On an unexpected trip—
Won't come back.

Worth Your While

"It is well worth your while," as the old saying goes, to see the fall stock of new clothing at Edgcombe's for men and boys, either in fine suits or in the stronger kinds of everyday and school wear. If you want something super excellent just order one of their "twentieth century" suits, for which Mr. Edgcombe is agent. Some people blow a good deal about what they can do in clothing, but at Edgcombe's you are sure to get full value for our money and satisfaction guaranteed.
