Several Bills were introduced, and motions for papers given. The enquiry of Mr. Gillespie whether it was the intention of the Government, in the present depressed state of the trade, to reduce the rates of stumpage, and if so, when a new scale will be put in force, was ruled out of order. Mr. Gillespie afterwards gave notice of enquiry with regard to lumber rates in another form.

Bill, recommitted by Mr. Marshall, to enable Margaret Frith to sell and convey certain lands, &c. Agreed to with amendments. Further progress was made in bill (Mr.

Boom Company.

In the afternoon, the House went in Committee of Supply. The discursive debate over the appropriation of $86,000 for great roads and bridges, was resumed. The famous Salmon River Bridge among other matters, engaged the attention of the members. Mr. Eider said it would be satisfactory to know on what evidence of its necessity, government had consented to expend money on it. The Surveyor General explained, that on coming into office, he found that arrangements had been made for its construction, which it was necessary to carry out. Quite a number of persons had petitioned for that construction and the two members of the County had consented to request the government to undertake it.

Mr. Blair condemned the management of FRIDAY, April 4.

the Board of Works Department in the matter of contracts for bridges, asserting that the bridge building was in the hands of a ring, and citing the cases of the Tabusintac, Southwest Moncton, and Ferry's Point bridges, in all of which he gave figures to show that very large sums had been paid for "extras," outside the first contract price. In the case of the Southwest Bridge, the amount for extras exceeded the sums paid under contract by $37,000. $38,837, was the contract price for the Moncton Bridge, $60,000 had been expended. It did not reflect creditably on the management of the department, that it did not approximate more closely the contract price to the actual expenditure. He was not at all satisfied that the Salmon River Bridge was required, and Hon. Mr. Landry had made a poor beginning in letting out the contract poor the management of the department, that it did not approximate more closely the contract price to the actual expenditure. He was not at all satisfied that the Salmon River Bridge was required, and Hon. Mr. Landry had made a poor beginning in letting out the contract price to the actual expenditure. He was not at all satisfied that the Salmon River Bridge was required, and Hon. Mr. Landry had made a poor beginning in letting out the contract price to the actual expenditure. He was not at all satisfied that the Salmon River Bridge was required, and Hon. Mr. Landry had made a poor beginning in letting out the contract price for the department, that it did not reflect creditably on the management of the department, that it did not reflect creditably on the management of the department, that it did not reflect creditably on the management of the department, that it did not approximate more closely the contract price for with price in the contract price for which the salmon River Bridge was made a poor beginning in letting out the contract price for which the salmon River Bridge was required, and Hon. Mr. Landry had made in my case, and, at the same time promising to write you from time to time t was required, and Hon. Mr. Landry had made a poor beginning in letting out the contract for it. Mr. Blair then diverged and took up and commented upon a number of items under the head of "travelling expenses, set against the Provincial Secretary. Hon. Messrs. Adams, Landry and Crawford, and expatiated on the wholly useless and unnecessary delegation of Hon. Messrs Young and Hanning ton to Toronto, (who visited Ottawa on their was during the eventful week of on their way, during the eventful week of the opening of Parliament) to make enquiries as to the cost of working the Legislature with one chamber. He read and ridiculed the report of the delegates. He then re-opened the question of the reconstruction of the government, growing, as he proceeded, indignantly eloquent. He had, in the debate on the address characterised the reconstruction as a politically immoral act, and in doing so he merely expressed the sentiments entertained of it throughout the country. A thrill of surprise and disgust had shot through the Province when it was known that gentlemen who had no political sympathy with the government, had prostituted their principles for the sake of office. He wondered that the representatives of the people had not entered a formal and indignant protest against the act, to stand on record for all time. It would be a sorry time for the country if such a political immoral act was condoned, and it came to be accepted as ordinary practice, that a government might buy support, and members sell themselves for office. He then expatiated on the labors of the opposition on restraining extravagance, and battling for good government, declaring that they had deserved well of their country, and should receive their reward.

The debate continued, the Provincial Sec retary satisfactorily explained the items of travelling expenses, and Mr. Landry corrected statements made by the leader of the opposi-tion respecting bridge contracts and extras, showing that under "extras" were included charges outside of construction costs. Mr. Hannington read the leader of the opposition Hannington read the leader of the opposition a lesson on the presumption of a young member as he was, presuming to lecture the representatives on their duty, and assuming such grand moral airs. Mr. Willis defended his leader and reminded Mr. Hannington that it did not lie with him to reprimand Mr. Blair for his presumption, as he, when he was a very young member indeed, had aspired to one of the highest offices in the Government. He attacked the department of Agriculture, and attacked the department of Agriculture, and desired information regarding the returns the Government had received for the money spent in importing Percherons, cattle, wheat seed, sheep. He read a resolution passed at a meet-of the St. John Agricultural Society, calling on the Government to import pure bred Ayrshires, to renovate the blood of that stock in the Province, meaning to perpretrate a joke at the expense of the Government, into which fresh blood had been infused.

A Romance of Austrian Actresses,

Two beautiful actresses in Vienna, wh had been intimate friends, quarrelled, and had their cases up in court, and the result was that one of them got judgement against the other for 10,000 marks. One of the fair ones had a sweetheart, a handsome young art student, whom she adored, but who went back on his vows in a most Theseus-like manner, on his vows in a most Theseus-like manner, at which the deceived girl went into tears, and began tearing up his letters, when suddenly from the mass of MSS. a lottery ticket dropped. Her fair friend was standing by vainly trying to console M'lle. Emilie, which was the forsaken one's name, and when the lottery ticket fell she implored her friend with tears not to throw it away, "Then you can take it," said Emilie, "for I will have nothing that came from that horrid will have nothing that came from that horrid deceitful wretch." Her friend took it, and after administering some more female consolation, went home. Two days after that M'lle. Emilie saw in the paper, which she always reads before getting up, that the num-ber of that ticket had drawn 5,000 marks She took the curl-papers out of her hair and dressed herself in three minutes, instead of two hours, as was her wont, and skipped to the room of her friend, saying, "I want my 5,000 marks, but you can't have it, my dear, because I've got under my pillow now. You gave me the ticket, and the prize is mine."

"You mean you want your The porter heard a first-class whirlwind going up-stairs, and reciprocal compliments of "audacious minx" and "immoral hussy," and ran up in time to see one young lady in a nymph-like scarcity of dress, standing in the middle of a floor covered with black hair, curl-papers, and other evidences of a recent battle. At the same moment M'lle Emilie arrived, similarly attired, in the street through the window. She brought suit for damages, and got exactly the amount of the lottery ticket; and the strange adventure so interested the false lover that he returned. renewed his vows, was forgiven, borrowed the 5,000 marks, and left, So that Mlle. A report comes from London, that worn out by his interminable financial troubles, Ismail Pasha, G. C. B., G. C. S. I., Khedive of Egypt, is about to abdicate. Since his accession in 1863, he has been continually beset by difficulties, and it would really be nothing wonderful if the report were proved to have some foundation in fact. Ismail Pasha, who is a grandson of the great Mehemet Ali, is in his forty-ninth year. He succeeded his brother, Said Pasha, whose reign was short and uneventful. He was educated in Paris, and on the whole has thown himself a man of liberal and progressive ideas, especially so for and eastern posentate. His reign will always stand out prominently even in the annals of historical Egypt, as it has seen the construction of that perhaps greatest achievement of the nineteenth century, the Suez canal. When he recovered the vicewayship Lemail, let it he assumed the viceroyship, Ismail let it be understood that he intended to pursue the policy inaugurated by his brother, that of development of the country, but still M. de Lesseps experienced some trouble in inter-time in the building of the canal. In esting him in the building of the canal. In July, 1864, every matter in dispute was set at rest by the arbitration of the Emperor Napoleon and the work was commenced, and five years afterwards completed. It was in five years afterwards completed was nearing 1869, when the undertaking was nearing INSOLVENT AUI its completion, that the Viceroy visited most of the sovereigns of Europe and invited them to be present at the opening. At times the Sultan has been greatly offended by the airs of sovereignty assumed by the Khedive, and a few years ago the Porte drew up a new firman, maintaining confirming, and defining his privileges, to which Ismail Pasha reluctantly gave in his adhesion.
