Cooper, a British engineer, there seems a possibility that we shall only have to go to the telegraph office, write down what we would say, and, heigh presto! the friend at the other end of the wire has not only the communication before him, but the very characters in which it is written.

To all who are suffering from the errors and indiscretions of youth, nervous weakness, very characters in which it is written. At present the operation is described as somewhat delicate, and hasty writing is impossible but future imp sible, but future improvements, it is expected, will enable one to write with almost as much speed as if penning on ordinary letter at a desk.

When the great Russian plague of 1871 had carried off three-fourths of the people of Moscow, it was checked by the frost. Expecting that it would break out again in the spring, Catharine II. commissioned Count Orloff to destroy all the clothing and rags left by the victims of the scourge. The Count knew that even despotic power could not compel the people to obey this order properly, so he set up in the rag business. "The highest price paid for cast-off clothing" "Clothing bought and no questions asked," were among the tempting official advertisements of the day. Thieves and scavengers were his industrious allies. Bonfires of were his industrious allies. Bonfires of clothing were made, and the houses and streets were cleared and disinfected. Next year there was no plague in Moscow.

Cetewayo, the Zulu King, according to the correspondents, is as merciless as he is bloodthirsty, and when he meets with his deserts thirsty, and when he meets with his deserts civilization will have cause to rejoice at the discomfiture of as perfect a specimen of a savage tyrant as the world ever gazed upon. "I have known him," says one correspondent, "to kill fifty women and children to feed his golden eagles. As brave as a lion, he will fight until he dies; and if he only sees a scratch on one of his warriors' backs when they return home he is put to death, as Cetewayo thinks he must have turned from the enemy and have thus received the the enemy and have thus received the Tea drinkers will be greived to learn that there is a good prospect of higher prices for their favorite herb. The imports of tea from China during the season just closed were 13,-000,000 pounds, which is 5,000,000 less than for the previous season. Under this reduction wholesale prices have already gone up three per cent. and the short crop in China promises a still further scarcity that will effect retail prices. Great Britain also has imported less than usual, and the price is advancing at London.

The first Chinaman who settled in San Francisco is said to have arrived there in 1847, and the news which he sent home as to gold discovery, speedly brought a number of his friends. By 1852, 3000 to 4000 had arrived. A company was then formed by Chinamen to aid emigration, and was followed by the establishment of several other companies. The Chinese population in San Francisco is about 30,000, of whom 2000 are women, 7000 are servants, and 5000 cigar makers. The rest are divided up among various occupations.

A man in St. Paul took out a life insurance policy for $5,000, one of the printed conditions being that the company need pay nothing if he committed suicide. He became insane, and killed himself. His widow sued for the $5,000 on the ground that, being driven to self-slaughter by insanity, a disease. does not constitute a violation of the suicide clause, which can be applied to criminal self-destruction only. The Minnesotta Supreme Court has decided for the widow.

1 The gas wells of Fast Liverpool, Onio, s said, furnish a continual supply of light and heat to the town, and as the gas costs nothing the street lamps are never extinguished. It is used almost exclusively for fuel, being conducted into the grates and stoves by pipes. For twenty years this has been going on, and there are no indications that the supply of gas is giving out.

A peculiar horse disease, which causes the limbs of the animals to swell badly and destroys their appetite, prevails quite extensively in the vicinity of North Troy, Vt., about 100 horses being affected, and old veterinary surgeons are puzzled.

It is stated that a train on the New York Central railroad made the distance from Rochester to Syracuse, eighty-one miles, in sixty-one miles, in sixty-one minutes, said to be the fastest time ever made in America.

It is stated 12,000 miles of new railroads are to be built in the United States during rails. Most of the additional roads are to be built in the West and Northwest.
