The Morning Post is in receipt of private letters from the Cape which describe the state of affairs in very gloomy colours. The first thing needed is either the proclamation of martial law in Natal or the passing of some measure by the Lieutenant-Govenor and the Legislature which will allow of all necessaries being taken for Government service. As matters stand, the English army is a victim of wholesale robbery; £400 is of all in Natal, and is being plundered by the very people whose war she is fighting.

Thomas Routledge, a leading English paper manufacturer, is endeavoring to induce capitalists to utilize the jungles of bamboo in adapted to paper making, and at a cost, compared with Esparto grass, in the proportion of $7.50 to $60 a ton. The latter grass comes principally from Algeria and other Barbary states, and, in addition to being unsatisfacbe obtained. English paper makers are, therefore, often driven to manufacture with wood fibre and China clay.

"Imperialism has just received a severe heck in Canada, and the colonists are begining to indulge in the heretical belief that a Marquis, albeit a Vicerov, is, after all, only man. This calamity befell at a cricketnatch just played at Ottawa between the ocal club and a parliamentary team. The Marquis played for Ottawa. In the first innings he made a duck's egg, his bails flying at the second ball. In the second he was out for three runs. In the present critical relations between the colony and the Crown this is a most unfortunate circumstance. I think Lord Dufferin would have carried out his bat."

Religious Cries.

The Toronto Mail, in an article condemning the raising of religious cries in the late

Ontario local election, says: "These religious cries are relics of the bad old days when sectarianism was the main issue in Canadian politics. That they are discreditable to the intelligence of our people and the spirit of our institutions, goes without saying; and how to suppress them, how to obliterate the bigotry of which they are the outcome, is a matter that should receive the earnest consideration of every thoughtful patriot and every good Christian.
