Announcement.

On the ffrst day of September, 1879, the proprietors of THE AGRICULTURIST admitted Messrs, Leonard W. Johnston and Alvin C. VANMETER to equal partnership with them in the publication of this paper and conducting a general printing business.

It is intended to change the name of the paper to "THE MARITIME FARMER," to enpaper such an one as will be indispensable to every progressive farmer in the Maritime Provinces and to increase its usefulness as a local institution. To further these ends, the one for the Agricultural Department, one for General News and Politics, one for the Local and Home Interests. We hope to perfect most of the new plans during the ensuing ditions which prevent them making the best week.

The new proprietors will carry on the business under the name and style of "The Maritime Farmer Association:" the managing control is vested in MR. LEONARD W. JOHNSTON.

The Deadlock in Quebec.

The quarrel between the majority of the Legislative Assembly and Legislative Council of Quebec has resulted in a complete deadlock. The Legislative Council refused by the land, the proprietors who till it. In to have any conference with the Assembly with the view of coming to some amicable The Conservative majority of the Council having got Mr. Joly in a tight place, imagined that he would be compelled the fruits of the labor, and the toil of the manner, and so the Legislature instead of geniture entail, &c., framed to preserve it in being dissolved, has been adjourned until the his family in perpetual possession, and which 28th of October, in order that in the interim even seem to be permeated by a leaven of public opinion may have time to express the spirit of the feudal system. The Conservative supporters of the Council point to precedents in the action of the British of way, that the Lords have, time and again, rejected the supplies. But fact, usage, and the opinion of constitutional writers of acknowledged authority are against them. one sense, it has been remarked, it is true that the Lords had a right to reject a money bill, but this barren right really amounts to nothing, as it cannot be exercised without withholding supplies from the Crown, "an act," says May " of which the Lords were not to be suspected." Rather than appear to refuse the supplies the Lords, however, much they may have objected to the wisdom proportion of certain imposts, have passed all money bills, with the exception of the Paper Duty in 1860. It may be remembered what a storm the rejection of the paper bill roused. May, the great constitutional writer, says, "Never until now had the Lords rejected a bill for imposing or repealing a tax raised solely for the purposes of revenue, and involving the supplies and the ways and means of the year. Never had they assumed the right of reviewing the calculations of the Commons regarding revenue and expenditure. In principle, all previous invasions of been trifling compared to this." In their

The majority of the Council accuse the Government of having been unable to carry out all the measures promised in the speech at the opening of the Legislature, of being surrounded by rings and corrupt influences, of being in short, weak, dishonest and incapable, but such accusations can always be, by hitter enemies brought against any Government. They cannot get over the fact, that the Joly Government has a majority, however small in the Lower House, that it has the sole right of the Lower House to grant supplies and all Money Bills, and that according to all sound constitutional usuage, the Upper House must pass the supplies as sent up. Probably the result of the deadlock will be Mr. Joly thinks, that, the current of public opinion is running strongly in his favor when he may hope to come back with a strong majority.
