COUNTY FAIRS.

In England and Scotland, County Fairs are held either monthly or quarterly, to which is brought from all parts of the country, specimens of the produce of the farm, of cattle, works of local industry and other articles for inspection or purchase, by the people of the town or city where such fairs are held. The result of these great fairs, or market days is, that great numbers of people attend from all parts of the county—large sales are made, and the convenience is felt by sellers and purchasers alike. The farmer and his calling are brought prominently into notice. During the interim, if sleep or oxen, or horses are wanted the party knows who to address and purchases by the remembered specimens on exhibition at the previous fair. In England, we are told, these county fairs give an impetus to business. The boarding houses and hotels are filled during the two or three days that the fair lasts, for it brings together the inhabitants from all parts of the county; and it is said many persons save their money to make purchases of dry goods, groceries, etc., on fair days. Of course as these things do not enter into what we now call "exhibitions," such as are coming off shortly in St. John and Fredericton—there are no premiums or expenses of any kind attending these fairs, except the small charge there may be for the use of grounds. And here it may be observed our Park Association have the sheds and houses already at hand for the use of such fairs. Now what say the Agricultural Society, under whose auspices the exhibition for next month is to be held? Why not at their leisure, or when they next meet, appoint a committee to look into the business, obtain reliable information of the real working of fairs in England, and other particulars, and report at a future meeting—in time for the first fair to be held about June of next year, and so continue them once a month, or quarterly, as practicable?

OPENING STREETS.

A short time since we noticed a disposition manifested by some of our citizens for opening a new street, in the vicinity of the old exhibition grounds. We also noticed an editorial in the Gleaner favouring a Park at the upper end of town. Now it appears to us that the time has arrived for promoting these two objects by a system of combination. If the reader will walk to upper end of Charlotte street, and cast his eyes westward he will see that by continuing this street it will run through or close by a beautiful grove of old trees and so continue through the O'Dell lands in a straight line to the Hanwell road, and thus an opening may be made both ornamental and useful to the public—a fine carriage drive say past Government Lane as at present, and return by the new O'Dell street. The estate would also be benefited in having this road opened, for there could be fine lots laid off on both sides of the new road, bringing in at the commencement, far more than the land taken up by the roadway. Let our City Council consider this suggestion; and if necessary have a bill prepared to go before the legislature next winter for carrying out the object. It has always seemed to us a pity to notice one half the broadside of Fredericton—from Smyth street to the Hanwell road—lying idle, or in fields of grass, because the owner could afford to hold on until the citizens had toiled enough to render their city prosperous and to bring in this land to the enrichment of the owner, while he himself, like an Irish landlord, residing out of the city, contributing nothing to its productive welfare, except the payment to its coffers of a disproportionate amount of taxes. Since our citizens have been petitioning for the opening of new streets and also want a Park, here is a chance to make a beginning and in the right direction.

OUR MARKET.

The regulations respecting the market in this city are very unsatisfactory, and it is well nigh time that some steps were taken to remedy the evil. This plan of peddling produce from one door to another is most unsatisfactory, both to the residents of the city as well as the seller, to say nothing of the injustice done our several grocers. The market laws should be strictly enforced, and people coming to town to sell their stuff should be given to understand that the market, and there only, must they dispose of their produce. By this means we would be supplied with good country market where purchasers could select what they required, and the whole system would be much more satisfactory to all concerned. Let the law be strictly enforced and justice done.

FOREST HILL CEMETERY COMPANY MEETING.

The annual meeting of the Forest Hill Cemetery stockholders was held at the Church Hall on Monday afternoon last. The following report of the directors will convey to the stockholders generally how the affairs of the company stand at present. The financial statement of the secretary treasurer, also read at the meeting, is too lengthy for the space we have at command, or we should gladly publish it. We have been requested, however, to say that this document will be found in the hands of the secretary, who will be pleased to show it to any stockholders, and make satisfactory explanations. The old board of directors continue in office for the next year, viz: Geo. E. Fenety, Chairman; Hon. Judge Steadman, Hon. Senator Wark, Dr. Harrison, L.L.D., Hon. Judge Fraser, James A. Vanwart, Q. C., and James Farrell, Secretary.

Report. Gentlemen,—Since our last general meeting the directors have not a great deal to report in connection with the business operations of the cemetery. Although not so many lots have been sold to realize funds enough to enable the directors to make necessary improvements on the grounds, still there is a steady and increasing sale going on, so that the hope is encouraged that in a few years the cemetery will be greatly changed in its general aspect, for example, the main roads will require attention as regards their sweep and formation, so that access from one road to another by carriages will be rendered much easier. A certain amount of drainage is required yet to be made; the cross fence at the back of the grounds now in use requires attention and made substantial enough to keep out cattle. Water is required for the keepers dwelling, and a well will have to be sunk or an artesian arrangement provided.

But these and other works not mentioned will require to be carried out as regards to our finances permit, and as gradually in arrears for lots and "calls" pay up. Your directors have always shown a willingness to work and give their time gratis in the interest of the cemetery, and it is but reasonable to expect that debtors to its funds will be considerate and render the task of management more pleasant by paying up their arrears. Some of the directors have been in office since the organization of the company, upwards of fifteen years, and will feel thankful to be relieved of their duties, and have others elected by this meeting, if not they will hope that their services will be recognized by those who seem to think that a few men should do all the work while they refuse to do their simple duty in providing them with their respective amounts.

Our secretary will lay before the meeting a full account of our finances. The amount of our indebtedness may be here stated at $870, bearing 6 per cent. interest, this together with the sale of lots and calls covers the expense, and remains after paying for the land alone (100 acres), building a Receiving Vault, large outlay for repairs to the keepers dwelling, as well as all other expenses. Respecting the receiving vault for the winter, the directors believe that it will come into general use, as such arrangements are better understood. In all winter climates of other cities, those receiving vaults, form part of the burial system, and depositing in them in winter is made obligatory. Here as yet the use of the vault is discretionary with the friends of those who die in winter. Its success has been fully proved as a safe and preservative place, as our keeper stated on the removal of a body last spring after having lain in the vault during the winter months. It is highly desirable that the friends of the cemetery should keep this matter in view. During the past year the directors have added to the rules of the cemetery, and to one of these rules in particular they wish to direct earnest attention. Persons owning lots in some cases feel that they are at liberty to erect fences and monuments upon them in their own way even encroach upon other lots or walks not only in placing their work in position but in dragging heavy loads over and cutting up the grounds. In future before any person can go to work in the cemetery he must first call upon the president and explain his intentions as to what is to be done and the president will then hold himself responsible for the right carrying out of any plan. If the harmony of the cemetery as in all other such places is to be preserved, a rule like this is needed. Otherwise as in some cases in the past, it is feared our cemetery will exhibit as time goes on a sad want of oversight on the part of the management. The directors beg leave to express the hope that something will be done by the authorities to place the road in order leading from the railroad to the cemetery, as it is in a very bad state at present for want of drainage at the sides, and the removal of stone from the road bed. Another serious matter to which they beg to direct attention is the habit some persons have of playing heaps of manure and other offensive matter at the foot of the hill, to the annoyance of persons going to and returning from the cemetery. As the Board of Health has just taken this matter in hand and punished one of the lawbreakers, through Judge Marsh, the directors feel that this nuisance will now be abated, all of which is respectfully submitted by the directors to the stockholders.

JAMES FARRELL, Secretary Treasurer. Fredericton, Sept. 7th, 1891.

Sundry Ebulitions in Prose and Rhyme.

How the Domestic, Social and Literary World is Wagging.

Mr. Henry Irving is the trustee of a somewhat curious fund. The daughter of a well-known London physician left some £3,000 to be deposited in a bank, and its interest to be applied to the purchase of several bottles of the best champagne for the use of actors and actresses on every occasion when the play calls for drinking wine upon the stage.

Brazilian titles of nobility are only held for life, and are easily purchasable. It is said that the Emperor Dom Pedro, who was a humorist in his way, built and maintained a lunatic asylum with the produce of the titles he conferred in the course of his long reign.

The Shah of Persia is an enthusiastic and fairly skilful photographer, and wherever he is, in the town, in the country, or in the mountains, he has always at his side a chief Court photographer, who must be ready with his camera, at the shortest notice in order to perpetuate a landscape, a group, or anything that may have taken his ruler's fancy.

There is a good story about the late Archbishop of York, who does not seem to be much known. He was once informed that a curate in his diocese was in the habit of wearing an Oxford hood whilst officiating, through he had only taken his degree at some small theological college.

"Why," exclaimed his informer, in tones of indignation, "the man wears a lie on his back."

"Hush, not a lie," said the worthy prelate, "call it a false hood."

Abreast of the Times. At an old curiosity shop in the Rue de l'Odéon, Paris, there is on sale an ancient timepiece labelled: "Socialist clock going only eight hours per day."

The leaning tower of Pisa is to be quite outdone if the plans of a resident in Chicago are carried out in connection with the World's Fair in 1893. The stone tower of Pisa is 179 feet high, and leans 13 feet from the perpendicular. That of Chicago is to be 225 feet high, 70 feet square, and to lean no less than 100 feet out of the perpendicular. The structure is to be a huge cantilever, containing 500 tons of steel above the foundation, and will be able to carry a weight of about 80 tons on the floor of the top story.

The Princess of Wales has the finest set of furs in the country. They were a silver-wedding gift from the Emperor and Empress of Russia. Her Royal Highness occasionally wears them at some great State function.

A Lame Excuse. Mother: "What! You don't mean to say that the lieutenant has been here all the afternoon? Haven't I forbidden you to remain alone in the company of gentlemen?"

Daughter: "Why, ma, there was only one."

A German physician says: "That women require a larger amount of sleep than men. The nervous excitability of the female constitution is generally greater than in the case with the stronger sex, and a woman's sleep is consequently lighter. Her dreams are more vivid, and leave a more lasting impression on the memory. Women addicted to dreaming usually sleep longer than those who do not dream, for dreams induce weariness. Anyone who sleeps without dreaming rises on the morrow refreshed from his couch, which is otherwise not the case."

The cost of taking the census in Edinburgh was over £1,000.

Extraordinary Sumambulist. An extraordinary case of somnambulism is reported from one of the rural districts of Paris. The patient is a young man whose legs have been completely paralyzed for some time. In his usual health he is unable to move without the help of crutches, but when the fit is on him he can walk long distances without the slightest assistance.

A few nights ago he got up and started for a neighboring village, followed by some of his relatives, who never lose sight of him when he is in this condition. He arrived without misadventure at the house of a friend, knocked at the door and asked for refreshment.

After having rested for a few minutes he returned home, and as it was still very early in the morning, he sat down on a bench and waited until the people began to come out of their houses. He then went to bed, and awoke a few hours afterwards without feeling the least fatigue, though he had walked more than ten miles, nor had he the slightest remembrance of the expedition which he had undertaken.

Story of a Legacy. Some years ago there died in Silesia a gentleman of the name of Nielsen, universally known as an inveterate quarrelsome. Before his death he bequeathed to his valet 20,000 kroner and to his cook a like sum, on condition that the legacy of the one party should be given to the other in case either the cook or the valet got married. No sooner was Mr. Nielsen laid in his grave than his two heirs celebrated their wedding, after which the young couple proceeded to Hamburg, where they have been living for the last six years. A week or two ago Mr. Nielsen's relatives at Copenhagen got to hear of the marriage, and demanded restitution of the 40,000 kroner, and the provisions of the will had not been complied with. The former valet and cook, however, maintain that they have fulfilled their obligations, for when he (the valet) got married he transferred his 20,000 kroner to the cook, who, on her part, made over her legacy to the valet. The case is shortly to be tried, and every body is anxious to know the result.

A Night of Dancing.

With the dances now in vogue, a lady taking part in every set will perform in a single night a distance of 30 kilometres (19 miles), hopping on her toes, and her body compressed in a corset, not unlike a cuirass for unyielding rigidity. If the same lady were required to perform the same journey on foot, in suitable attire, and on the best roads, she would declare most positively that it would be the death of her.

The average number of persons in each family of the United Kingdom is, as nearly as possible, four and a half.

He Got the Seat. A nice young man got into a tram-car a few evenings ago, and saw to his delight the only vacant seat was by the side of a young lady acquaintance. He made for that seat with joyous strides, and her eyes answered his with delighted looks. But just as he got there an elderly party walked up and dropped into the coveted seat. The young man approached more slowly and accented the young lady:

"How is your brother?" he asked; is he able to get out?"

"Oh, yes!" she answered. "Will he be very badly marked?" he continued, and the old gentleman grew suddenly interested.

"Oh, no!" she said with the exception of a few marks on his forehead."

"Were you not afraid of taking it?" the young man continued, while the old gentleman broke out in a cold perspiration. "Not at all," she replied; "I had been vaccinated, you know."

The seat was vacated instantly, the two innocent young hearts beat as half a dozen, and the prattle of "nice talk" strewed that part of the car, while an old gentleman scowled upon them from the distant corner.
