A Bathurst Merchant Charged with Run-

The story runs thus: A prominent merchant of Bathurst had a fancy for farming, and to test his ability purchased a farm from a Frenchman in that locality. The farm was a good one, but the merchant was not able to make it pay; so in order not to lose more than was necessary on the transaction he established an illicit whiskey still, and got the Frenchman from whom he had purchased the farm, to run it. This the man agreed to and did run it for some time, until it suddenly occurred to him that he would like the farm back, so he went to the owner of the farm and still and asked for the farm for nothing. If he was refused he would tell the authorities about the whiskey racket. The merchant thought the man was trying a bluff game and of course refused. Mr. Frenchman, however, gave the matter away, with the result that the authorities pounced down and captured the still and its owner and all. Just what will be done is not yet known.
