Breed your own stock.
Foul feed makes foul meat.
Filthy food generates disease.
Use lime whitewash liberally.
What is the merit of idleness?
Nature sows nitrates in the fall.
Fruit is food—remember that.
Pigs furnish the best side pork.
Eat more poultry and less pork.
There is no tariff on pure-bred sheep.
The profit is in young growing stock.
It is the scrub man that breeds scrubs.
A thrifty sheep produces the best wool.
Clover hay is worth $26 a ton in London.
Cows are spoiled when they are heifers.
To cream milk should be at perfect rest.
March is a bad month for lambs to come in.
Pigs should be as uniform as peas in a pod.
A good reputation insures a good market.
Don't keep hens in damp or dark quarters.

No one has discovered any merit in idleness.

The fancy butter maker makes the most profit.
Wheat is said to be a good crop to follow beans.
Save all refuse matter for fertilizing purposes.
Fat is cheaper than lean meat, pound for pound.
Almost everyone has learned what a scrub is.
Nature applies all fertilizers as a top-dressing.
Don't stint your animals for either food or room.
Give the hens the run of the orchard in the fall.
Don't allow weeds to go to seed in the garden.
Winter only such stock as it will pay to winter.
Dairying produces a tolerably steady income.
Plant your orchard on high and dry ground.
Crops draw more from the air than from the earth.
Hens need nitrogenous food when moult-ing.
Aim always to use better blood for breeding.
A full supply of pure cistern water is desirable.
"Better late than never," but never late is better.
Not the least among the necessities of life is pure air.
Age and condition determine the time of fattening.
Have something to sell when the market calls for it.
The better the breed the more you get for the feed.
It is a poor farm that can't feed the stock grown on it.
The soil, as well as stock, needs a balanced ration.
There should always be a gleanings out of the poorest.
Make your flocks of sheep of those of the same size.
Aim to die like the summer in the glory of old age.
Better selection of seed would bring better crops.
Have plenty of dry dust for dust-baths for your hens.
The strawberry should be treated as a biennial plant.
An authority is one whom we choose to accept as such.
Hang up a head of cabbage and let the hens pick at it.
Give the sheep shelter and let them run in and out at will.
If you would have your stock thrive, keep it contented.
In danger, presence of mind is next to absence of body.
Where the soil is cool, the gooseberry is free from mildew.
More farmers ought to butcher their own animals for meat.
A garden should be arranged with taste and for convenience.
Fruit is food and should be so considered and used in the family.
Potted plants soon exhaust the soil in which they are potted.
Selling poor stock or poor goods hurts yourself and the market.
Watering is as important as feeding. No animal can live without water.
It is a poor farmer that keeps more stock than his farm will feed.
An old hen thoroughly cooked is more nutritious than a chicken.
There is no profit in keeping beef animals after they stop growing.
Stalling fat two-year-olds reduces the cost and increases the profits.
Men do not pay attention enough to quality and quantity of food.
Steady feeding to a fair amount is better than heavy feed irregularly.
Profuse floral displays are said to be no longer fashionable at funerals.

The cost of composting manure depends a Oxygen is the most plentiful and important

Nitrate of soda is now pronounced the

See that your animals are in good condition when they go into winter quarters.
There is no special merit in being a vegetarian. Yet some folks talk as if it were.
Moisture is necessary for the retention of nitrogen as it is for its absorption from the air.
A good deal of hard work is required to overcome the evil effects of a bad beginning.
At last corn-cutting machines appear to be doing the work of the sickle and corn knife.
Don't let your stock get so salt-hungry that it will kill itself if it gets a barrel of salt.
Pork can be just as well preserved by salt alone as by the addition of other ingredients.
We need certain elements in our food, and they must be available, whether animal or vegetable.
Experiences do not always agree. Gravitation causes one man to fall and another to rise in a balloon.
The wool of a well-fed flock is worth more per pound than that of an ill-fed one, and there is more of it.
In milking, grasp well up on the udder, so the teat cistern.

The Siam soldier is said to have to catch a not compelled to eat them.

If our food is digestible and contains the right element, it matters not whether it is animal or vegetable, or both.

THE DAIRY.
A Jealous Cow.
The following comes through The Spectator of New Zealand, as told by Mr. C. Hunter Brown, of Nelson: A few years ago I had a quiet milk cow, Rose, which was certainly fond of Thomas, who milked her regularly, and she also showed an aversion to dogs even greater than is usual in her species. One night, for what reason I now forget, I had tied up a young collie dog in the little cow-shed where she was accustomed to be milked.
The following morning I had just begun to dress when I heard the puppy barking in the cowshed. Oh, thought I, I forgot to tell Thomas about the puppy, and now the cow will get in first and gore it. The next moment I heard a roar of unmistakable fear and anguish—a human roar. I dashed down to the spot, and at the same moment arrived my son, pitchfork in hand. There lay Thomas on his face, in a dry gutter by the side of the road to the cowhouse, and the cow butting angrily at him. We drove off the cow and poor Thomas sniffed across the road, slipped through a wire fence, stood up and drew breath. "Why, Thomas," said I, "What's the matter with Rose?" "Well, sir," said Thomas, "I heard the pup bark and untied him, and I was just coming out of the cowhouse, with the pup in my arms, when Rose came round the corner. As soon as she saw the pup in my arms she rushed at me without more ado, knocked me down and would have killed me if you hadn't come up." Thomas had indeed a narrow escape; his trousers were ripped from end to end and red marks all along his legs showed where Rose's horns had grazed along them. "Well," said I, "you'd better not milk her this morning, since she's in such a fury." "Oh, I'll milk her right enough, sir, by and by; just give her a little time to settle down like. It's only jealousy of that 'ere pup, sir. She couldn't abide seeing me fondling of it." "Well, as you like," said I, "only take care and mind what you are about." "All right, sir." In about twenty minutes Thomas called me down to see the milk. The cow had stood quiet enough to be milked. But the milk was deeply tinged with blood and in half an hour a copious red precipitate had settled to the bottom of the pail. Till then I had doubted the jealous theory. After that I believed.

The Late Moulting Hens.
Old hens that are not now in full feather and which have not passed through the process of moulting, might as well be sent to market at once as to have food wasted on them for they will not now begin to lay before early spring. November is as late in the year as the moulting should extend, as the hens that have not now moulted will be overtaken by the cold season before they have become prepared to endure the cold.

Remove the Glass Eggs Now.
A glass or porcelain egg in the nest is a thing of torture to the hens in winter, as it becomes very cold, and the hens must place their bodies upon, and in direct contact with it, there being not only a loss of animal heat, as the egg is warmed to the temperature of the body, but it sometimes causes the hen to take a heavy cold and become useless. Nest eggs may be omitted in winter.

Small Broilers.
There is sometimes a demand for very small broilers about Christmas and during January and they bring a high price. They should not weigh over three quarters of a pound.
They are used in place of squabs, the demand being mostly for the sick or delicate persons.

Wheat, Corn or Hay.
Which is the best grain is sometimes asked.
There is no best grain, as the grains differ in their composition. When the hens are thin in flesh and the weather is cold, they will prefer corn, while at other times they will prefer corn and accept oats or wheat. All farmers are aware of the fact that the hens desire a change of food, and it is not always the case that the proper kind is selected. It is an excellent plan, when feeding grain, to use equal parts of wheat, corn and oats, so as to allow each hen preference, and the grain should be scattered so as to afford all of them an opportunity to secure a fair share.

Duck Eggs for Hatching.
At any time after Christmas the ducks may begin to lay, especially the Pekins, and the eggs will be high in price, especially if the large incubator operators begin early. The early ducks are hatched in incubators, so as to have them in market by May. The duck house should have a board floor, the space on the floor being entirely clear except a few nests along the sides. These nests may be simply box partitions. The floor should be well covered with leaves or straw, and the water trough should be so arranged as to be protected as much as possible, in order to avoid freezing of the water. Allowing warm water as often during the day as can be conveniently done will be found of advantage.

HIS LAST LETTER
MURDER NEILL CREAM'S FARE-WELL MISSIVE TO A MON-TREAL FRIEND.
He Knew He Would Hang.

Some Personal Peculiarities of Cream That Were Noticed by Personal Friends—A Course and Brutal Nature in All Things Concerning Women—How the Insanity Plea was Regarded by Those Who Knew Him.

"I do not expect to escape the fate which has been laid out with such great care for me.
My solicitor is more hopeful than I am, but his confidence in the success of his efforts is based altogether upon law points which, in a matter of this kind, are usually brushed aside.
I have no fault to find with anything. * *
This may be the last word you will receive from me. I feel that I am writing you for the last time and that we shall never meet again in life. My experience during the past six weeks has made me indifferent to whatever may befall me. I can look at the fate which seems impending, with resolute calm, and shall meet it when it presents itself with the fortitude becoming in a man. There are many things in my life that are proper subjects for regret, but the mood in which I want to remain until I am called to bid farewell to existence forbids the entertainment of such thoughts. The only object that I shall retain in memory to the end are a few—the very few friends that I have had like you, Farewell, a last farewell. * * So far as any confession claimed to have come from me is concerned I say to you right here that it will be false.

This is one of the last letters written by Dr.
Thomas Neil Cream, who paid the penalty for the crime of murder on the scaffold in London, England, Tuesday of last week. The letter is dated November 6, and was written in his prison cell. It is directed to a close personal friend residing in Montreal.

"It would be a hard thing for me to speak of him as guilty of the crimes which were charged against him on his trial," said the gentleman to The Toronto Times reporter.
"He was a strange individual and his ways were peculiar. The more intimately one became acquainted with him the more of a human puzzle he appeared to be. His disposition was extremely phlegmatic, but while always appearing at perfect ease, there was a restraint about his speech and actions that would not knowing the possible real cause, would pass for the diffidence usually attached to bashful reserve. It would be impossible on an ordinary acquaintance to conceive him guilty of being the monster villain which his prosecutors in the London murder trial painted him. In some matters his taste almost bordered on the aesthetic, but I do know that in all matters relating to women he was coarse almost to brutality. His jokes and his stories were all of a vulgar stripe, and frequently extremely silly in the strained effort to turn an obscenity into a laughable matter. In this respect he sometimes bordered on rank idiocy. But nobody who knew him would claim that he was insane or irresponsible for anything he might do. He was too deliberate and methodical for a lunatic."

ELOPED ON HER WEDDING DAY.
Husband and Wife to be Tried for Bigamy in the Same Court.
A queer story was brought to light on Monday last when Herman H. Glose, a conductor on the Western New York & Philadelphia Railroad, was arrested on a charge of bigamy, but when his first wife turned up alive, and married again a sensation was created.
The courts now have an exceedingly complicated case to settle. Eight years ago, in May, Glose married Miss Annie Wagner of Shunway street. Late in the afternoon the bride disappeared, and all efforts to find her proved of no avail.
Two years after, Glose heard of her death in a small town near Philadelphia. He then married Mrs. Flach, a widow with four chilren, and until yesterday lived what appears to have been a happy life.
The first Mrs. Glose, it seems, eloped on the day of her marriage with another man. They went to St. Mary's, Pa., to live, and the woman came to Buffalo to make a visit. She was recognized by some of Glose's friends, and Mrs. Glose No. 2, heard of the previous marriage for the first time. She immediately went to the police station, and swore out a warrant for her husband's arrest, and he is now in the custody of the police, charged with having two living wives.
A warrant for the arrest of Mrs. Glose No. 1 has been issued, and she too will be arrested on the charge of bigamy. Husband and wife will be tried in the same court.

A Tonic and Reconstructor.

week." All dealers or post paid, 50c. a box or six boxes for $2.50. Beware of imitations and substitutes. Dr. Williams' Med. Co.,
