AGRICULTURE

FOR THE FARM, FIELD, GARDEN AND Gleanings of Interest for Our Country

Put in a good garden. Keep clover growing. Sand helps a clay soil. Work well rather than fast. A good farmer is never idle. Hens sit best in cool weather. Fat hens are not good layers. Rudeness is becoming to no one. Don't be deceived in your seeds. Is your garden in good condition? Flowers are certainly a joy forever. Wheat is better than oats for hens. A garden is a luxury for everybody. Use solid materials in making roads. Take good care of your timber trees. Never be unreasonable with a child. If hens get fat, send them to market. A patch of gladioli is very enjoyable. Don't pasture down clover, but cut it. Persistent good care and feeding pay. Give all animals free access to the soil. Intense culture is best for small fruits. Use odd spells in making needed repairs. Breeding from grades is breeding down. Be systematic if you would be thorough. Cultivating flowers is good for the soul. The Sitting Hens. At this season there will be quite a busy time with sitting hens. As many as half a dozen may become broody at the same time, and it will pay to allow them to hatch broods. Before a hen is permitted to go on the nest, see that the nest is clean and free from lice, for the nests of sitting hens are the hotbeds from which millions of lice come. The next point is to examine each hen, and if signs of lice are noticed, rub a few drops of melted Keep the tools scoured and the harness lard on the skin of her head and neck, and dust into her feathers with fresh dalmation powder. If an egg is broken in the nest, the entire nest must be changed, new material being given, and the eggs washed in tepid water. Hens that are in the same house must be so separated that they cannot quarrel or interfere with each other. These preparations, carefully made, will insure better hatches and lessen loses of chicks when hens bring their broods off.

Don't Break Up the Sitters. If one calculates the period necessary to break up a sitting hen, it will be found that it is a loss of time. Hens seldom begin to sit until they are fat. It is, perhaps, nature's method of reducing them to a proper laying condition. When a hen is fat and becomes ready to sit, she may begin to lay, comes off, she may be broken up and her chicks given to some other hen. She will Lessening the Feed.

As soon as spring opens the hens will have a tendency to fatten very readily if given too much grain. Quite a saving in food may be made by allowing the hens to seek their food, giving only a meal when they come up at night. Much depends on the weather, however. If a few cold days appear the hens may receive a partial meal in the morning of wheat, which should be scattered well, so as not only to compel the hens to search for it. but also to avoid the possibility of the greedy hens receiving more than their share. If the de Gotha' has ascertained that, omitting the use of skim milk can be made, the hens should be given all they wish to drink, as it than Her Majesty the Queen are Adolf of is an excellent egg promoter.

THE DAIRY. Prof. Robertson on the Effect of Rennet in

It has been accepted as a fact that the effect of rennet continues on in the cheese while curing, and that the greater the amount of rennet the more rapidly the cheese will cure. The practical maker and the scientist have concurred in this, and it was supposed to have been settled by practical tests. But tests made last year by Prof. Robertson appear to set this conclusion at nought. He mixed milk in one large vat, anywhere from Artichokes are said to remove worms if fed 4,000 to 6,000 lb.
